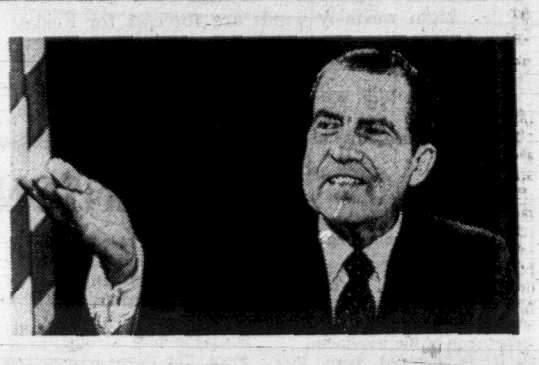
MOVE 'POLITICAL WIN'

Way to Peace . . . Military Victory

'I can now state that this has been the most successful operation of this long and difficult war.' —NIXON



By CHALMERS ROBERTS
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Wednesday night did exactly what this capital had expected him to do — declare victory in Cambodia and announce a big new American troop withdrawal from South Vietnam before election day.

He even showed the TV-viewing public some of the captured weapons, and the White House put out a list of what had been swept up "as of 4:00 p.m. June 3, 1970."

In short, Nixon gloried in what he termed the "most successful operation of this long and difficult war." He reminded the critics of their cries of disaster, and he swore they were proven wrong.

While June 30 remains the deadline for the last American to get out of Cambodia, the president kept open his option for further "air missions" after that date, and he left the South Vietnamese all the room in the world to keep up their incursions into Cambodia.

On the short term, the weight of the evidence is with the president on what has been accomplished by the military action inside Cambodia. The real problem is long-term: what comes after Cambodia, what will the enemy do, is there any hope of a negotiated settlement?

In discussing the long term, the president conceded that "there is one basic commitment" he has made that is "yet to be fulfilled" — ending the war. His prescription remains the same: Gradually turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese if the North Vietnamese will not negotiate as he sees negotiations.

His unspoken but implicit aim remains: A South Vietnam free of Communist domination. Given the stalemate at the Paris peace table, that amounts to a military victory as the way to peace.

As to negotiations, Nixon said all past offers remain on the table, but he made no new offers. And if Hanoi will not negotiate on those offers and instead respond militarily, they will

'MEDIEVAL, ILL-EQUIPPED'

MPs Condemn B.C. Pen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Members of the Parliamentary justice committee Wednesday labelled the federal British Columbia Penitentiary "ancient, medieval, outmoded and ill-equipped for the modern prison concept of rehabilitation."

Donald R. Tolmie (L — Welland), chairman of the 12-man committee, said the maximum security prison is 100 years old and was built in an age when punishment was the only criterion.

The committee came close to a confrontation with penitentiary officials when prisoners in the segregation unit alleged they were given daily release periods only after authorities were advised of the MPs' tour.

Prison officials said those prisoners usually take part in a work program, but added that there was no work for them until Monday.

Assistant Deputy Warden T. J. Ellis said the release order was made before anything was known about the committee's tour.

He said most of the segregated prisoners are sex offenders — considered to be the lowest form of criminal by other inmates — and are usually in the "hole" at their own request, either for self protection or because they can't face up to life as a part of the prison population.

"This shouldn't be allowed to exist," said Robert McCleve (PC — Halifax).

"These men will be mental wrecks when they are released."

"I have to fight an aggressive nature," he said.

"But in here, I have to fight back to stay alive, and this defeated the whole purpose.

WANTS MATSQUI

Kannister asked the committee to "give us the women's section at Matsqui Prison" and Douglas Hogarth (L — New Westminster) thought it was a good idea.

"It was designed for 150 women," said Hogarth.

"There were 22 there during our visit Tuesday. At this rate, it is costing the taxpayers $23,000 a year for each woman inmate."

A prison is to be built in the Mission area in the Fraser Valley east of Vancouver to phase out the B.C Penitentiary, but committee members said it hasn't been decided if maximum security facilities will be included.

Hogarth said he is looking forward to the day when the last penitentiary brick is removed.

"The prison program of allowing inmates out for short periods of training and rehabilitation is the only incentive these men have," he said.

The tour of the New Westminster prison completed the committee's B.C. visit. Earlier it had inspected the Matsqui institution, Agassiz Mountain Prison, the Agassiz Work Camp and the Georgia Release Centre in Vancouver.

Today, it visits the penitentiary in Prince Albert, Sask., prior to returning to Ottawa. The committee is expected to make recommendations to Solicitor-General George McIlraith and may submit a direct report to the Commons.

Red Paper Fine —Not Red Power

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

CARDINAL
. . . Indian spokesman

OTTAWA — Harold Cardinal's Red Paper approach to the Cabinet was welcomed here today, but not his indication that if it fails he'll switch to Red Power tactics.

Before leading a delegation of 150 Indian Association of Alberta members, and several B.C. chiefs, to present the Red Paper to the government, Cardinal told a reporter he was ready for a long struggle if the Trudeau administration resists the proposals.

"Our movement is going to last longer than any politician," he said.

And he added that if the Cabinet turns down the Red Paper, Canada's 238,000 Indians "may have to consider the route of civil disobedience."

Len Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops and the only Indian in the Commons, expressed mixed feelings about Cardinal's attitude.

"I don't buy this social dissent bit and I don't believe most Indians will either," he said in an interview.

"He might choose it, and a few other individuals too, but the basic Indian community is stable and sound. It is not given social dissent.

"It would rather discuss and debate the issues to bring change."

However, without having seen the Red Paper's contents, he praised its existence as a manifestation of a new mood among Indians.

"Today's exercise is a useful thing and this is the way it has to be done — solid, researched and well-produced written counter-proposals," he said.

NO DIALOGUE

"For too long there has been no dialogue between Indians and the government and policy has been made in a paternalistic vacuum.

U.S. Says Embargo Will Stay

Times News Services

The White House and U.S. state department denied Wednesday that any decision had been made to lift the so-called "selective embargo" on shipment of major weapons to Greece.

A story in Wednesday's editions of the Washington Post, which described shipments of planes, tanks and Howitzers last year under a 1968 decision by President Johnson, and said the Nixon administration had decided "in principle" to lift the three-year-old embargo entirely, was described as "misleading" by spokesman John King.

King said "some aircraft" — he would not give their type or number — and minesweepers had been sent under the Johnson decision, which he noted had been announced by the state department on Oct. 22, 1968.

But other officials denied flatly that any tanks had been authorized or sent.

Jet Kidnapped

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner with 51 passengers was hijacked over Arizona today by a man demanding $100,000,000 in small bills delivered to him when the plane landed in Washington, a TWA spokesman said.

Break in Towboat Strike Seen by Guild Spokesman

Times News Services

Merchant Service Guild chief negotiator Capt. Arne Davis following a negotiating session which ended 4 a.m. today hinted at the possible break.

He said he could offer no details about the actual negotiations and did not elaborate except to say the guild is aware of close support from other unions.

In B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday, the guild was fined $5,000 by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm for contempt of court. The guild ignored an injunction banning picketing at a pulp mill on Howe Sound, just north of Vancouver. The plant closed when 400 workers refused to cross the guild picket line.

The towboat strike has hit hard at the B.C. forest industry, because the tugs are used to tow logs to the sawmills, and to tow away barges of sawdust. Supervisory personnel are operating some tugs, but all products handled this way have been declared "hot" by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

EXPIRES JUNE 15

The IWA contract itself expires June 15 and affects almost 30,000 men in southern B.C. About half already are out of work because of the tug dispute. Mediation officer Clive McKeen conducted exploratory talks Wednesday in the forestry dispute, meeting both sides separately.

In the pulp and paper industry, negotiations have

Bennett Asks Lockout End On Schools

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett today appealed to both sides in the construction industry lockout to make a "special effort" to proceed with construction of schools and hospitals.

He also announced he has asked for an immediate cut in the prime interest rate charged by chartered banks from 8½ to 7½ per cent to stimulate the economy.

But Bennett, just back from a successful Japanese tour, expressed confidence in B.C.'s economy as "the best in the nation" and looked forward to a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year.

"Nobody should be fearful," he told a press conference, adding that all it will take for "a really good year" is for management and labor to get

Troop Pullouts Denied

Times News Services

A U.S. command spokesman in Saigon today refuted President Nixon's statement Wednesday night that U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam have been resumed.

Nixon in his television speech in Washington said:

"As a result of the success of the Cambodia operations, Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird has resumed the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. Fifty thousand of the 150,000 I announced April 2 will be out by Oct. 15."

But the U.S. command in Saigon, when questioned on the withdrawal, denied any troop pullout.

"Everything's still static now," said a spokesman.

Nixon told the American people the Cambodian operation had been a success.

Calling the attacks on the Communist sanctuaries "the most successful operation of this long and difficult war," he said that "we will keep our timetable for troop withdrawals."

The withdrawals, which were halted in late April because of the Cambodian operation, now have been resumed, the president said.

SHOWED FILM

The president used film and captured material to illustrate his argument that huge quantities of supplies have been captured in the operation he announced on April 30.

He said that the success to date "has guaranteed that the June 30 deadline I set for withdrawal of all American troops from Cambodia will be met."

When he announced the Cambodian operation, the president said, critics charged that it would "increase American casualties, widen

Postal Talks Resume

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Rotating strikes kept about 1,600 postal workers off the job today as unions stepped up the pressure in their contract dispute with the government.

Latest to join the walkouts, as representatives of the unions and the government reopened negotiations this morning for the first time since mediation efforts ground to a halt, were 350 workers in Saskatoon and eight other Saskatchewan centres.

The Council of Postal Unions and the government's treasury board negotiators met today for the first time since mediator A. W. R. Carrothers, called in last week, packed up his efforts. Carrothers, ending his mediation attempt Tuesday, said neither side was willing to budge enough to warrant continuation of mediation.

NO COMMENT

Representatives of both sides refused to comment on whether they expected progress at today's meeting.

National union headquarters is orchestrating the rotating strike calls through a teletype network.

Benson to Seek Pay, Price Controls

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A stormy Liberal caucus session Wednesday finally agreed that Finance Minister Edgar Benson should sound out the provinces this week on their reactions to a proposal to impose compulsory wage, price and profit guidelines.

Unemployment stirred up the storm behind the closed doors, where worried Liberal backbenchers spoke freely. They voiced alarm over the mounting proportions of the unemployment problem, linking it with the federal government's anti-inflation restraints.

Benson as the finance minister was again the storm centre. He has already been the target of criticism for his proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Now the Liberal MPs are very worried by the growing numbers of unemployed.

It is understood the government acknowledged that the numbers of unemployed were greater than it expected would develop from its anti-inflation program.

How best to cope with the situation was discussed. The imposition of compulsory wage, price and profit controls and the easing of anti-inflation restraints both were debated.

Arguments for and against applying mandatory guidelines for prices, profits and wages were heard. Those opposed warned that the country had gone through the hard experience of such controls during the war and should avoid them at all costs. Others advocated controls and contended Canadians would learn to live with them.

When he meets with the provincial treasurers from the 10 provinces in Winnipeg Friday and Saturday, Benson will sound out their reaction to a system of compulsory controls. Ottawa, if it is to embark on this drastic step, requires the consent and co-operation of the provinces.

It is doubted here that Ontario or British Columbia would go along with such a plan. If they are opposed, Ottawa will probably turn to easing up on its anti-inflation restraints.

Anger over the government's apparent inability to cope with inflation and to deal with the flat refusal of organized labour to participate in a program of voluntary restraint on wages, was voiced during the caucus session. Business agreed earlier this year to go along with the government on a program of voluntary restraints on prices, but pointed out that to make if effective in combatting inflation, labor had to participate and agree to curb wage demands.

The government's prices and incomes commission was attacked by some Liberal backbenchers for failing to come up with an effective fight against inflation.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister John Basford rose to the defence of the commission. He told the MPs the commission had done more than they gave it credit for doing and rejected the criticism of the PIC. Confirmation of this came from Prime Minister Trudeau following the caucus, when he smilingly declared that Basford had engaged in some lively exchanges with "our own members."

The prime minister himself recieved enthusiastic and hearty applause from his Liberal supporters on his appearance in the caucus following his successful Pacific tour. He soon realized, however, when he heard the MPs raising their voices in protest, that all had not gone well on the home front in his absence; problems that existed before he departed had grown worse.

In the Commons later Wednesday, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield noted that Basford had informed the House the Prices and Incomes Commission is now preoccupied with studying the wages and salaries aspect of inflation. He asked if the members were to assume that the PIC is in process of making a new proposal.

Basford said the commission is exploring a number of initiatives that might prove useful. He added that when it is appropriate to make an announcement, one will be made either by the government or the commission

Later, outside the House, he explained that having encountered a flat refusal from organized labor to join in the voluntary restraints program it put forward, the commission was now seeking another way of bringing about restraints on wage demands as well as restraints on prices.

When Finance Minister Benson announced the unpegging of the dollar Sunday, he said the government was now reviewing its general economic and financial policies under the changed circumstances. The Sunday announcement by the Bank of Canada of a reduction in the bank rate from 7½ to 7 per cent represents an easing of the restraint policies.

Employment is the big headache now facing Parliament. The threat of a nation-wide Post Office strike and the paralysis in British Columbia through strikes and walkouts which could spread throughout the country has the Cabinet gravely concerned.

Because of this growing crisis, Benson will approach the provincial treasurers this weekend with the suggestion that they consider empowering Ottawa to embark on compulsory controls or guidelines.

the war, lengthen our involvement, postpone troop withdrawals. But the operation was taken for precisely the opposite reasons — and it has had precisely the opposite effect."

He argued that "we have eliminated an immediate danger" to American troops, "won precious time" to train South Vietnamese forces, and have insured the continuance and success of our withdrawal program.

BOMB NOW

He warned that Cambodia will be hit again by the United States from the air and South Vietnam on the ground under the policy guidlines.

He served notice that Communist supply routes in Cambodia are in for heavy bombing and that the South Vietnamese are free to make fresh ground assaults across the border.

On the war front:

● Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces captured Set Bo only 10 miles southeast of the Cambodian capital but government troops retook the town later today. The Communists control most of the provincial capital of Kompong Thom, 80 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Curtis Scored For Silence On Towboats

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich should have called for federal intervention in the towboat dispute when he called for more provincial action in B.C. labor problems, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Wednesday.

He said he was "at a loss to understand" why Curtis hadn't mentioned the towboat strike—"that's where all our difficulties stem from"—in a New Westminster speech Tuesday.

Curtis had said Peterson and Premier Bennett should personally intervene in an effort to settle the current labor-management war in B.C.

"Why doesn't Mayor Curtis recognize the real trouble is primarily in disputes coming under federal jurisdiction," Peterson said, when asked to comment.

He said he has had meetings with important figures in labor and management and would be having more.

The strike of 1,150 Canadian Merchant Service towboat officers has idled about 20,000 workers in B.C. It is under federal jurisdiction.

. . . RED PAPER

Marchand said he agreed with the Red Paper's theme, Citizens Plus.

He said Indians "have that status now, but eventually we have to get away from paternalism and special status for any people in Canada — and that includes Indians.

"We don't want to ride on the backs of anyone," Marchand said.

He said Indian problems were largely the result of blunders by past governments, but "real change in policies and public opinion is beginning. Things started to happen in 1960 when we got the federal vote. That was a very significant turning point."

Marchand said the jump from 1960's $60 million budget for Indian Affairs in 1960 to this year's $212 million "demonstrates there is a genuine change underway, but a lot more improvements are needed before Indians can run their own communities."

Chretien also welcomed the presentation of formal counter-proposals "as I asked," but declined any other comment before the meeting.

. . . POSTAL

A post office spokesman said the stoppages today were in effect for about 1,600 workers in the provinces of Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Ontario and Saskatchewan.

Wednesday's strike calls affected workers in northwestern Quebec, Calgary and the British Columbia communities of Prince Rupert, Kitimat and Terrace. They were back at work today.

C. M. Drury, treasury board president, chiefly responsible for the government end of the contract dispute, indicated Wednesday the government was not swayed by the rotating strike activity.

"If the dislocations remain no greater than at present," he said in an interview, "they are not an urgent problem for the government."

No special action is planned either to close down the post office entirely or to bow to union terms for a new contract, he said.

BACK TO START

Drury also said that following the departure Tuesday of mediator A. W. R. Carrothers the two sides are back to roughly the same positions on the key issues of wages and job security as were outlined by their representatives in a counciliation report four-weeks ago.

Any improved offers the government made through the mediator, Drury said, have been cancelled by the rejection of the unions. The government plans no new wage offers, he said, but will continue in its efforts to persuade the unions that its proposals are satisfactory.

Despite the prospect of more drawn-out talks with no sign of an early settlement, there were no indications that the unions will switch tactics and call a national strike.

Oil Deal Made

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House announced today the United States will increase oil imports from Venezuela during the second half of 1970, and indicated the increase may be extended beyond this year.

The disclosure was made by White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler after President Nixon and Venezuelan President Rafael Caldera held their concluding talk of Caldera's state visit.

together in a spirit of good will.

Contrary to the views of some labor and business leaders who suggested he was being naive in calling for good will, Bennett said, there is evidence that labor-management relations are "more pleasant" now than they were two weeks ago.

He said he has asked Labor Minister Leslie Peterson to call together labor and management in the construction lockout to get school and hospital projects going again.

"Surely neither management or labor wants to hurt the school situation or hospital construction," Bennett said.

He said 400 school classrooms have been authorized by the Treasury Board and would provide space for 12,000 students this fall — if they are ready.

He also made clear the province will spend all of the $175 million authorized for hospitals this year and that Health minister Ralph Loffmark's current efficiency campaign is aimed at keeping costs as close to that level as possible.

Bennett said he asked for a reduction in the chartered bank interest rate today in telegrams sent to Finance Minister E. J. Benson, Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky and the head of the Canadian Chartered Banks Association.

He noted that the Bank of Canada interest rate charged to the chartered banks has been reduced twice recently — from eight to seven per cent in two stages — but no cuts had been passed on by the banks so far.

He said it is "essential" that high interest rates be cut.

The premier dismissed a statement by provincial Conservative Party leader John De Wolf, an economist, that provincial revenues may be down as much as $250 million this year.

Sales tax revenue had increased slightly in the first two months (April and May) of the fiscal year, Bennett said, predicting a balanced budget but without the surplus "leeway" of other years.

He said former U.S. President Roosevelt's remarks about there being "nothing to fear but fear itself" would be apt for the current B.C. economic situation.

On his arrival from Japan Wednesday, Bennett said "great new business" will be stimulated in B.C. as a result of the trip.

He said today there would be new Japanese activity in the forest industry. Forests Minister Ray Williston has gone to Germany from Japan to continue discussions with forest industry interests, he said, adding that the provincial Treasury Board's restrictions on ministerial travel expenses don't apply to job-seeking ventures.

Bennett said that social welfare expenditures for the year may be higher than expected because of a large influx of people into the province.

But he said that the budgetary situation will remain under control because the government was "realistic" in assessing the coming year.

Bennett said management and labor should listen to his requests for good will "not because the premier's name is Bennett" but because the premier speaks for the people."

"Do they mean to say they're going to solve any problems without good will?" Bennett asked.

. . . WAY TO PEACE

face new American military action of an undisclosed nature.

Three times before, the president has warned Hanoi not to jeopardize American troop withdrawals. He concluded, he said, that what they had been up to in Cambodia did just that, even "in face of an explicit warning" in his April 20 speech not to do so. Thus, he continued, he had acted in Cambodia because "failure to deal with this enemy action would have eroded the credibility of the United States before the entire world."

Wednesday night the president said that next time he would take "strong and effective measures" against the Communists "as my action five weeks ago demonstrated."

In sum, Nixon Wednesday night claimed success, said he will be just as tough militarily next time and contended that those who had subjected him to "an unprecedented barrage of criticism" for going into Cambodia were the mistaken ones, not he.

There was no word last night about the weak Lon Nol regime in Cambodia or whether the United States will do anything, directly or indirectly, to shore it up. Here only the weak reed of the Djakarta conference diplomacy was cited as a way to "maintain Cambodian neutrality."

The president thus avoided any new commitment, but that does not mean he can avoid the problem of how to prevent the Communists from overrunning Cambodia in the coming months, a move that could negate all the gains he claimed Wednesday night.

It is probable, as many in Washington feel, that the president has won a short-term victory on the battlefield, and that in terms of this November's congressional elections he has won at least a respite and perhaps even scored a positive gain.

But none of this will appease his many war critics. The Nixon determination to see the war through to his concept of a just peace leaves in doubt his stated aim: "An era of reconciliation" rather. Than "a period of furious recrimination."

Bus Tour Planned For Travel Writers

About 35 Canadian and American travel editors, writers and still and motion picture photographers will tour Vancouver Island from Monday to next Sunday travel industry Minister Kenneth Kiernan said Wednesday.

The visitors, arriving from Montreal, southern California and Hawaii, will be taking part in the seventh of a series of annual tours sponsored jointly by the department of travel industry and Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

"This is one of several of our tourist promotion projects that have become annual events," said a departmenet spokesman. "Each year we select an area of the province for this promotion, and with the co-operation of local organizations and individuals in the tourist industry we arrange to give the travel writers a good idea of the region's tourist attractions."

Tour director will be John Buckley of the department of travel industry and G. Jack Thomas will be representing the bus company.

The group will spend Monday and Tuesday in the Victoria area. On Wednesday they will visit Duncan, Crofton, Chemainus, Ladysmith, Yellow Point, Gabriola Island, Nanaimo, Cathedral Grove and Port Alberni.

Thursday will feature a trip on the motor vessel Lady Rose from Port Alberni to Ucluelet followed by an overnight stopover in Tofino where the visitors will stay at the Wickaninnish Inn.

After visiting Long Beach, the group will travel to Parksville on Friday, and on Satruday, will visit Qualicum, Courtenay, Campbell River and Quadra Island.

B.C. Will Send Aid To Peru

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said today he expects British Columbia will provide disaster aid to earthquake-stricken Peru.

Shelford, chairman of the provincial Diasaster Aid Fund, said B.C. will await word on what the needs are before deciding on a contribution. It might be plywood for building shelter, he said, adding that food may not be the most serious need.

been postponed because of the towboat strike. The industry says it will not negotiate while pulp mill workers refuse to handle logs delivered by tugs carrying management crews.

Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees picketed outside Penticton City Hall today, adding 170 to the number of workers idled because of strikes or lockouts across the province.

Also outstanding are the construction industry dispute and another between the provincial government and non-medical hospital employees.

On the brighter side, air traffic is back to normal at Vancouver International Airport after two days of disruption caused by widespread picket lines set up by strikers from three car rental firms.

ALL-ROUND CADET REWARDED AGAIN

For the second year in a row, the son of former Victoria city architect and planning officer Roderick Clack has received the Coast Guard College Award, presented to the best all-round cadet.

Engineering Officer Cadet Christopher Clack received the award at term-end ceremonies.

In addition, he obtained the highest standing in second-year academic results in both navigation and engineering divisions.

His parents now live in Ottawa where Clack is chief architect for the National Capital Commission.

'DON'T PUT US IN A BOX'

Church Must Relate to Humanity

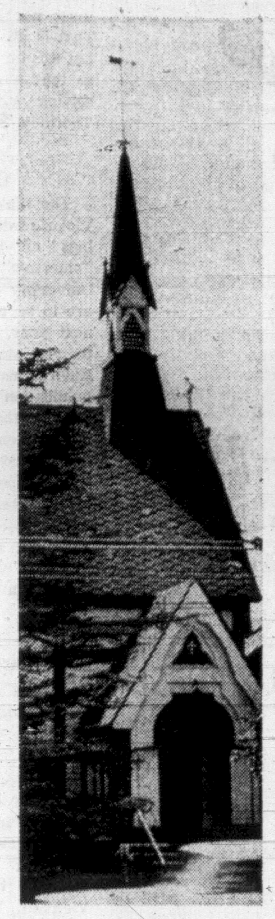
By JACK SCOTT
(Third of a Series)

The bishop seemed on the edge of anger.

He's a tightly-sprung, intense man in his mid-forties, wearing a Rinso-white turtleneck sweater instead of the Roman collar, a little intimidating in his brilliance, his eloquence and his commitment, more so now in his impatience with the questioner.

"Don't put us in a box," snapped Remi De Roo, youngest-ever bishop of the Roman Catholic Diosese of Victoria. "You asked if the churches are being shocked out of euphoria by the evidence that there's a drift away from the religious institutions. But you're speaking only of people who were shocked because they were comfortable in their institutions. That, simply, is not our real concern.

"If the Christian church is to be an incarnate religion, not just an abstract package, but a religion that really speaks to man, then it's vital that it should be very close to the human experience and relate to this completely new pattern. Anything else is just putting us in a box."



Optimism

Over and over, in meeting Victoria's leading churchmen, I found this insistence on a clear-cut distinction between what might be called an organized church and a disorganized faith. The result is a tremendous optimism startlingly at odds with the bare statistics.

Bishop De Roo put it emphatically.

"If you ask is there a lessening of interest in our traditional organizations," he said, "then the answer is yes. There's reason for serious alarm. Many of them are in the process of collapsing. But if you look at it in terms of gospel values and what the real mission of Christianity is all about then I think it's an exciting time. I see profound changes. The church has suddenly become aware of the depth of the evolution and the necessity to present the gospel in completely new, meaningful ways."

Canon C. Hilary Butler, a handsome, quiet-voiced man, at once suave and concerned, nods agreement as the bishop straightens out his questioner.

"Yes, we may be in a period of disillusionment, in the sense that a lot of old illusions are now being dispelled," the Anglican theologian concurs, "but the interest in religion, as such, is on the rise. As for the leading thinkers within the church today, they're attaching less importance to specific structures and more importance to the soul of the thing. We're much more ready to change, or to allow change, than in other ages."

Agreement comes, as well, from Rev. John Watson, the 39-year-old Baptist who heads the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

"We can't use statistics as a slide-rule test of the vitality of the church," he warns. "Even though the church may be smaller in size the movement has been toward a greater quality of understanding about what Christian discipleship should mean. The church is in a state of flux, sure, but so are all the major institutions of our society. The church is alive, it is reassessing its responsibilities and the signs are encouraging."

Watson's predecessor as council president, Rev. Dr. Samuel Parsons, is another who, accepting the evidence of decline in numbers, is unwilling to interpret it as imperilling the church.

"We've gone through a period in which the gospel has been watered down and secularized," in his view, "but after a good deal of questioning, challenge and doubt we're coming into a period of refreshment in the life of the churches. We're getting over a narrow-minded interpretation of things, getting over hypocrisy and unreality and an unwillingness to understand and appreciate people. Too many of us have sat quietly within the churches without realizing that all around us the world is aflame."

Dr. Parsons, along with many others, believes that a gradual coming-together of denominations is just one sign of hope for the future of all churches.

Bivouacs

"In the past," he said, "individual churches were so tremendously concerned with their own little bivouacs that all they were doing was keeping the machinery going without any idea of why the machinery should be working at all. Well, it's taking a heck of a long time, but the inter-denominational movement is one of the most important changes ahead. Too often the word ecumenism has meant only a benign tolerance of different points of view, a polite synonym for spinelessness. If it's genuine it will lead us to God's true church, a church not identified with any denomination."

Rev. Norman Archer, past president of the Evangelical Christian Fellowship, sees the inter-denominational trend as "a healthy movement" and adds: "We must regard denominations not as opposing groups, but as Christians who can agree. We're different sections of an orchestra, each in obedience to the score and the conductor. The Bible is the score, Christ is the conductor."

Challenge

A somewhat different view was taken by Rev. J. L. W. McLean, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church who said, "Denominationalism is not the villian. The trouble lies in the existence of selfish denominations, composed of a majority of selfish individuals. Selfish individuals do not become less selfish by gathering under one roof or given one name or asked to subscribe to the lowest common denominator of their several beliefs. The church, in its various groupings, will seriously grapple with social issues only when there's a passionate belief and strong commitment to Christ's way of life."

Bishop De Roo, on the other hand, saw this coming-together of denominations as "the common challenge of Christianity" and added, "the various Christian churches are going to work together more and more, even in the training of their ministers."

He cited the recent relaxation of the Vatican's discipline on mixed marriages, opening the way for the clergy of non-Catholic denominations to share in "the joint pastoral welfare" of Catholic and non-Catholic couples, as something of an ecumenical breakthrough.

"It's only a crack in the door, of course," he said, "but what it means in practical terms is that we can sit down with clergymen of other Christian churches to exercise a common ministry."

Upheaval

On the wider question of new attitudes or "a new image," many agree, in part or in whole, with the Toronto Anglican theologan, Jacob Jocz, who sees "a tremendous and long-overdue upheaval in the religious establishment, a new wave to update and clarify traditional positions in theology, social involvement, even methods of the ministry."

Bishop De Roo sees that in somewhat cosmic terms.

"Why, even the basic values on which man relies to make judgments of what is right or wrong are in a state of tremendous upheaval," he said. "This is not only in the area of religion, but right across the human experience. Take the field of science, for instance.

It was a basic law, for example, that what went up must come down. No more. The moon shots took care of that. A lot of things that went up are never going to come back. In other words, our whole concepts of the universe has been modified. Even the new insights into man's self-understanding through the behavioural sciences alter our black-and-white concepts of what was right or wrong.

"It's in that context that we have to look at the challenges to Christianity," the bishop went on. "We need insights into the human mind. What makes a man reach conclusions? How is he influenced by his own environment? How has he become the product of his own experiences? How does he relate to other human beings?

"Can we any longer make the easy moral judgments about man's responsibility that we once made? These questions have profound ramifactions in religion. They offer the real challenge to the presentation of the Christian message at a time when, too, often, we're still talking in the 19th century context."

Kingdom of Tonga Marks Independence

NUKUALOFA, Tonga (AP) —The band played traditional British airs, the 100-man army paraded and the flag went up to two 21-gun salutes. But only 3,000 of Tonga's 80,000 people turned out for the independence ceremony Wednesday night as the Pacific island kingdom ended 70 years as a British protectorate.

The ceremony was held near King Taufaahau Tupou IV's two-storey white-frame palace. As the 40-piece military band played, the entire Tonga Defence Force of 100 men and the palace guard of 25 paraded before the feudal ruler of Tonga's 130 islands.

The 325-pound king was in his commander-in-chief's uniform complete with British cockade hat.

There was no cheering. The islanders treated the occasion as a serious one.

Tonga has a land area of 290 square miles and an annual income of $3,800,000, mostly from copra. It is trying to increase tourism to provide employment for many who have no land.

Islanders started an all-day, all-night cookout for the feasting Friday that is the highlight of the four-day celebration.

War Poem Written In Dugout

OTTAWA (CP) — The most famous Canadian poem from the First World War began in a small dugout while German poison gas drifted across the Canadian positions near Ypres, says an old warrior who was there.

Col. L. Moore, Cosgrave, reminiscing at the Royal Canadian Legion convention here, said in an interview he was sharing the dugout with John McCrae when the medical officer began writing In Flanders Fields.

As the two men huddled for safety, McCrae pulled a pen and pad from his pocket. He propped the pad against his companion's back and wrote the first verse of the poem that caught the attention of his country.

Col. Cosgrave, now 79 and retired, recalled that McCrae, later killed, had a sensitive mind that found an outlet in writing poetry. He wrote continually, often tearing up unsatisfactory pieces.

A poet was almost sure to react to the situation of the time on the French battlefield, he said. The poppies, referred to in the poem, were blooming—"spots of red coming up through the hard ground."

Mr. Nixon's Timetable

ONCE AGAIN PRESIDENT Nixon has appeared on television to give a war report to his people. And once again the results appear to have been the same as on previous occasions: the believers continue to believe and the unbelievers reject his words. Last night's report followed much the same format as earlier ones: a recapitulation of gains and a confirmation of dates by which withdrawals both from Cambodia and from South Vietnam will be effected. This is hardly enough to still the anti-war protests that sweep the United States, but the Cambodia report, like the Cambodia invasion, may win a little time. And time is what Mr. Nixon obviously needs.

Mr. Nixon has two and a half years in which to disentangle himself from an Asian jungle war and throw his resources far enough into a domestic program of housing, jobs, youth, racial equality — any or all of them — to establish himself as a successful president who has fulfilled his promises and earned re-election. That achievement will not be in time for the off-year elections this fall, and Republican Congressional candidates will have to run on their own records. But the longer-range goal is not impossible, unlikely as it may appear.

That goal does not include victory in Vietnam, only disengagement and a return home without looking back. As an earnest of his intentions, Mr. Nixon promises the repatriation of another 50,000 United States troops by October 15 — which will leave him seven months more in which to bring home the other 100,000 he promised in his last national address. The complete removal by June 30 of the 30,000 American troops in Cambodia was again promised, and actually there is little reason at the moment why this cannot be achieved.

The objective of the invasion was to destroy the enemy headquarters and supplies in the Cambodian sanctuary. The headquarters reportedly have proved elusive, but the supplies — detailed in millions of rounds of ammunition and pounds of rice, as well as stacks of weapons — have been captured or destroyed. This undoubtedly will delay any plans the Viet Cong and northern forces may have had, but whether it means more than a temporary halt during the monsoon season is open to question. As commentators point out, China and Russia have vast stores of replacements if Hanoi needs them.

If Mr. Nixon is sincere in his intentions — and these would include plans for re-election — his anti-war opponents are helping him to gain a stronger position in the swirling controversies of Washington. He can set withdrawal dates and ensure that they are observed, so that regardless of opposition from the hawks the American forces will disappear from South Vietnam. What happens there after their departure may for a long time be as unpleasant as the war has been, but it will have ceased to be Mr. Nixon's problem and for many Americans it will have ceased to be a pertinent factor in domestic politics.

The final outcome of the long agony may well turn out to be what it would have been without the long agony: a Communist or Communist-inclined government in Saigon and a nation of peasants back in their rice paddies — in other words a wasted effort. The country at issue will never be the same again, of course; but what country that has felt the heavy touch of this twentieth century ever could be?

'A Breath of Fresh Air'

SPOKESMEN FOR A TOURING parliamentary justice committee say they have found "a breath of fresh air" in the Matsqui Institution — the Fraser Valley centre where modern approaches and treatment are being applied to narcotic addicts involved in crime.

This is a compliment to the federal institution, not because it has found a complete answer to particular penal problems with which it is involved, but because it is divorcing itself from old, ineffective methods which have proved unendingly futile over the years.

Matsqui is important in the federal system because, under liberalized and progressive direction, it has helped staff and inmates to reach a better understanding of the rehabilitative work before both of them. How successful it has been in clearing up addiction is a matter still under study, but at this point gratifying results have been shown in checking reversion to crime by those who have been treated.

Several progressive programs have been inaugurated there. Selected prisoners, for instance, are permitted to work on farms in the district during the day and return to the institution at night to sleep. And, says a cautious guard who "touches wood" before making his statement: "We haven't had anyone spoil it yet. It's good for the farmers and good for our men."

Intensive psychological treatment has been employed and psychiatric help is available. Apparently this has produced an atmosphere in which inmates get a better understanding of their own trouble and prison officers can develop promising new approaches to reformation of the men in their care.

It is gratifying to learn from the parliamentary committee visitors that at Matsqui they have found "a breath of fresh air," with the implication that correction means something better than its old definition — mere punishment.

Slow Pace of Government Studies

IF THE FEDERAL GOVERNment were as quick to publish the reports of committees and commissions as it is at ordering studies done there would be little room for criticism. But such is not the case. Events often made obsolete the long-delayed comments of the Commission on Bilingualism and Bilculturalism. Delay is usually laid at the doorstep of the government's translation service. No report is publicly available until English and French versions have both been completed.

In the case of a topical report like that of the LeDain Commission on the non-medical use of drugs it would be better to publish the report no matter in what language it is first available. The release was to be ready in April, then it was to be May after reports of difficulty with the French translation. It is now June and the public still does not have the report. Meanwhile, the criminal courts and hospitals are dealing with a parade of youthful drug users.

There is little doubt that the government could tighten up its procedures in publishing reports of commissions and hearings. Senator Robert Stanbury and the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee have been debating whether a parliamentary watchdog is necessary to oversee the operations of the new monolithic Information Canada. The snail's pace in publishing important studies lends further support for the presence of such an independent overseer.

FROM MONTREAL — By RICHARD PURSER

Bomb Blasts—Last Gesture or New Start?

MONTREALERS awoke Monday morning to read screaming, memory-stirring headlines — "Time Bomb Blasts Shake Westmount;" "Seven Bombs Sow Terror in Westmount" — and to wonder, as they have so often in the past, what the future holds here. The five bombs that exploded in the small hours of Sunday morning — two others were later found unexploded and were safely dismantled by the Montreal police bomb squad — were reminiscent of "Black Friday", May 17, 1963. That was when six bombs exploded in mailboxes about the suburb, five more were dismantled, and a sixth exploded in the hands of a demolition expert, maiming him for life.

Purser

The occasion marked the emergence of the Front de Liberation Quebecois, the underground organization dedicated to achieving Quebec independence through violence. The FLQ has never died, but the intensity of its activity has fluctuated greatly. There was a notable period of calm before the April 29 provincial election,, in which the Parti Quebecois — no relation whatever to the FLQ—sought to achieve separation of Quebec from Canada by peaceful means.

But after the election gave the PQ second place in the popular vote but only seven seats in the 108-member National Assembly (owing to Quebec's inequitable electoral map), rumors promptly started in Montreal separatist circles that the terrorists were planning a new offensive greater than any Montreal has known in the past. Four earlier post-election bomb blasts in Montreal preceded Sunday's co-ordinated outbreak in Westmount, the suburb which to French-Canadian nationalists symbolizes the wealthy English-speaking "ruling class" of Quebec.

Earlier Bombings

The major outbreak of 1963 was also preceded by other scattered bombings, one of which killed a night watchman and resulted in 11 FLQ members going to jail for up to 12 years.

There have been many terrorist incidents in the intervening years. One 25-year-old was sentenced to life imprisonment last year for 31 bombings, one of which heavily damaged the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges. There were 50 bombings in the Montreal area in 1969 alone, one of them blowing up the home of Mayor Jean Drapeau, who lives under perennial threat despite — and perhaps partly because of — his immense popularity with the peaceful majority.

The greatest cause celebre in FLQ history has been the twin cases of the terrorist pals, Pierre Vallieres and Charles Gagnon. The former was twice convicted of manslaughter in a 1966 bomb death and twice won on appeal. Still facing other charges, he is the author of "White Niggers of America," a hysterial appeal to French-Canadians to free themselves. The book was seized from bookstores by police last year as seditious. Gagnon was acquitted of manslaughter in the death of a 16-year-old terrorist whose bomb exploded prematurely as he was carrying it to its target. He also faces other charges. Both are out on bail — Vallieres was released only last week — after a long and emotional campaign marked by street marches, demonstrations and riots.

The theory behind the campaign to "liberate" the pair was that both were political prioners despite the actual crimes with which they had been charged. The two went to the United Nations in 1966 to plead for other Quebec terrorists being held as "political prisoners."

Sunday in Westmount came at a rotten time, just as Montreal was coming out of its mood of depression with an optimism born of Olympic fever, and as the province as a whole was looking forward with new confidence under the strong federalist regime of Premier Robert Bourassa. If the bombings turn out to be the beginning of a genuine campaign and not just the peak of another brief cycle, optimism and confidence can disappear quickly. And the last thing the terrorists want to see is a Quebec prospering happily as part of Canada.

Fanatics

Mr. Bourassa called the bombings "a last, futile gesture of despair by fanatics of a dying cause." All Quebec hopes he is right, but the only thing certain is that the bombings were the work of fanatics. As Quebec's leading editor, Claude Ryan, commented, there is no gentle way of describing or dealing with the terrorist who elevates his political opinions to a dogma so absolute that human life is barbarically subordinated to the pursuit of his objectives.

But Quebec is in trouble if the bombings were the first, not the last, gesture of a new wave of violence by fanatics who do not despair but feel they are on the march and who feel their cause is not dying, but only temporarily frustrated.

Two bombers achieved a suitable goal — scaring hell out of everybody and gaining spectacular publicity. The bombs damaged homes of such noted members of the "establishment" as Hugh McCuaig of the stock-broking firm of Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig, and Peter Bronfman of the Distillers Corporation family.

Furthermore, the co-ordination of the time bombings was anything but amateurish. Westmounters were scarcely back in their beds after one blast before they were roused by another. Another sign of FLQ efficiency occurred a few days earlier when two simultaneous blasts diverted police attention from one of the dozens of holdups through which the FLQ has been gaining funds to finance its members' living and its dynamite purchases.

Mr. Bourassa told the press that the new climate of confidence was so firmly established that terrorist gestures could not destroy it; that the majority flatly condemns terrorism; and that such a movement cannot work when the majority desires stability. Maybe, but a terrorist minority can wreak tremendous havoc before its flight into ultimate futility is ended.

Police Attack

The premier made another comment —"the police are on top of the matter" — which has an encouraging basis in fact, although terrorists are furtive, work in cells, and are hard to keep on top of. Montreal's policemen, most of whom would dearly love to personally strangle any FLQ member they catch, are throwing everything they have into this problem. Mr. Bourassa and his justice minister, Jerome Choquette, are putting all the provincial government's resources behind them.

The anti-terrorist squad has arrested four young men, three of them last week, and are hot on the trail of two others believed responsible for 19 local armed robberies and a dozen more outside town. Officers believe the arrests may break the nucleus of a key FLQ cell, possibly the "master" cell itself.

If so, the Sunday bombings may indeed have been almost the "last gesture" Mr. Bourassa hoped they were — until the next cycle of fanatics arises.

Voting No

It is voting time again in Central Saanich. We sanction or turn down the sewerage plan drawn up by the council. Picture what our district could be in a short time: then say no, thank you! We must not be guilty of such sacrilege. That is all that matters at the moment. Let this be our way of holding up council so that it may consider other ways of solving our pollution problem — F. A. Our Environment

The Biology Club of the University of Victoria will be publishing the proceedings of the teach-in "Environment Tomorrow" which was held at the University on March 7. The proceedings are to be put out in four parts over the next year, each part having a distinct theme, starting with "Views of the Environment." If the response to the publication is satisfactory it will continue beyond the first four parts as an environmental newsletter.

I would be glad to receive letters from people who attended the teach-in, for publication along with the proceedings. Also anyone who wished to subscribe to this publication should get in touch with me.—Robert G. B. Reid, Department of Biology, University of Victoria.

Correction of 'Idiocies'

I have evidence for correcting statements made by Sandor Kovacs in his letter to the Times on May 30, "Idiocies."

At Central Junior Secondary School, 1280 Fort St., last fall, I, with a large audience heard Magistrate Hugh Campbell of Campbell River, and Gordon Limbrick of Victoria, make almost identical remarks regarding atrocities in Vietnam. These two men were on the International Control Commission, representing Canada on the Commission, in two different areas.

Their efforts to investigate reported atrocities were impeded at every turn by the U.S. military; however, they were able to circumvent their harassment hundreds of times; and at every time it was the U.S.A., and its allies that had perpetrated the atrocities.

Then it was almost impossible to get their reports out to the general public for publication. And all of these atrocities had been out-lawed by international tribunals.

Another reliable source that cannot be contradicted is the report of the U.S. Study Team on Religious and Political Freedom in Vietnam that took place May 25-June 10, sent to Vietnam by the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Members of the team were unanimous in their statement that atrocities in Vietnam were at least 95 per cent committed by U.S. forces and their allies; also that there has been provision to prevent any act of violence against any group or groups of South Vietnamese personnel. There is an island only a short distance off-shore which will accommodate many thousands who may fear for their lives or fear torture; this to be guarded by United Nations Forces. This FOR report is contained in a 56-page report which I have and can be examined by anyone desiring to do so. — Wayne S. Huff, 831 Villance.

FROM WASHINGTON — By CHARLES BARTLETT

Arms for Greece's Junta

THE questionable success of the strenuous efforts by U.S. Secretary of State Rogers to suppress the Greek issue at the NATO meeting in Rome should persuade President Nixon to look hard at the Pentagon proposal to begin a new cycle of arms sales to the junta in Athens. Greek Foreign Minister Chrysicopolous warned beforehand he would walk out of the NATO Council if more than one of the other members assailed the Greek government. Rogers struggled, with the help of NATO Sec.-Gen. Brosio, to insure that only the Danes, under order from their Parliament, would make anti-Greek noises. But the Norwegians and the Dutch joined in, precipitating a lively hassle over the final communique.

Bartlett

The fact that the Greeks, who resigned from the Council of Europe last December to avoid expulsion, did not walk out of the NATO council was due less to Rogers' diplomacy than to their fear of political repercussions at home. Certainly the gesture would have made Congress less willing to participate in the renovation of the Greek armed forces.

Senate Action

It is not clear yet whether the Senate move to limit the President's authority in Cambodia will weaken the parallel effort to restrain Mr. Nixon from selling arms to the Greeks. Such an amendment, similar to one beaten 45 to 38 last October, is pending and its sponsors have until now nursed only modest hopes of winning majority support against the Pentagon.

The familiar arguments for this assistance, chiefly the importance of Greece as a pro-Western bastion in the eastern Mediterranean, are bolstered by the anxiety of French arms suppliers to attract the Greek colonels to their wares. The Pentagon warns that the French are making such tempting offers of credit that the Greeks may be seduced away from a reliance on American weapons that has been nurtured by over $1 billion in military assistance in the past 15 years.

The scare argument is the growing Soviet presence in the Mediterranean. This can seem so menacing that it becomes hard to remember that the Soviet ships are doing exactly what the American Sixth Fleet has done for 20 years — sailing about and showing the flag.

The lengthy American manoeuvres have had a curious effect. Officials in friendly coastal nations claim to have been so reassured by this naval presence that the withdrawal of even one of the two big carriers would stir grave alarm. These fears seem so real that the Navy, at considerable inconvenience, keeps two big carriers on station all the time.

Shipping

The Pentagon is advocating a $15 billion ship-building program. But the Italians have built only five destroyers and four submarines in the last ten years. The French keep their new fleet outside the Mediterranean, usually in the Bay of Biscay. The Spanish play host to the Soviet fishing fleet in the Canary Islands and the British have lifted the sagging economy of Gibraltar by being hospitable to the Soviet navy.

The incident at Rome has dramatized the potentially divisive impact of the Greek junta on the alliance. More restrained Socialists who hold power in Bonn and London may not be silent if the Americans embark on a program of heavy military assistance to a government representing few of the freedoms to which NATO was initially committed.

Certainly the American young, hard to convince that the defence of Western Europe remains crucial, will not be inspired by a show of support for the Greek colonels. It will be certain to agitate the widening controversy over the cost to this country, some $14 billion a year, of the NATO arrangement.

Since NATO is indeed crucial to the twin goals of defence and disengagement, the President will be wise to protect it from sullying entanglements that will leave it more vulnerable.

Looking Back

From the Times of June 4, 1910:

The people of British Columbia have heard Sir Wilfrid Laurier deliver addresses on political subjects — that is the comparative small number of people who lived in British Columbia 15 years ago. This generation will have another opportunity during the present summer when Sir Wilfrid Laurier visits British Columbia. After listening to his address we are convinced there will be little difficulty in reaching conclusions as to why there are divisions in the ranks of the Conservative party.

The Negro in America: Anxiety, Despair, Anger

"Black Americans today are more bitter and frustrated than ever before. The situation is very dangerous. The right spark could set off racial violence in any city in the country."

These words were spoken by Thomas Bradley, a Negro city councilman in Los Angeles. They summarize expressions of anxiety and despair that are widespread in the black communities of the United States.

By LOUIS CASSELS

During the past six weeks, I have travelled more than 10,000 miles to talk with — and more important, listen to — black people of all ages and income levels, in all parts of the nation. From Harlem in the east to Watts in the west, from Detroit in the north to Augusta in the south, I found them angry, resentful, cynical about white intentions, bitterly critical of the Nixon administration, determined to gain equality by whatever means necessary.

The vast majority of blacks whom I interviewed oppose any repetition of the rioting that brought many U.S. cities to the brink of chaos during the 1960s. They don't see any future in burning down their neighborhoods.

"But riots don't break out because black people consider them a good tactic for bringing about social change," Bradley said. "A riot is a spontaneous explosion of rage. And black rage is at an even higher pitch now than it was in 1965" — the year in which the Watts section of Los Angeles erupted in a week-long riot that cost 34 lives and more than $50 million in property damage.

"There's a greater sense of bitterness now," said Lewis Robinson, who helps manage a development program in the Hough area of Cleveland. "People had hopes after the riots, because all those promises were made. Now they feel there's almost no way to make it. That's dangerous because then they get to feeling, 'If I can't have it, nobody should have it.'

An Equal Share

"The white man either is going to have to give us an equal share in this country, or he's going to have to destroy us, and very damn soon."

Cleveland's popular and respected Negro mayor, Carl Stokes, said black people are well aware that if they resort to violence, "it will be met by overwhelming counterviolence."

"But they've tried peaceful demonstrations to appeal to the white man's conscience — and that didn't work. They've tried political action — and they find in power a national administration that seems utterly unresponsive to their needs. So now they're bewildered. They don't know just how to act. There's a feeling of helplessness and hopelessness."

It is a measure of the racial gulf that exists in America today that many whites will be surprised, and some irritated, by the news that black people still feel put upon. Many white people cherish the myth that blacks have made tremendous progress in recent years.

But blacks find it hard to discern any improvement in their overall situation. They acknowledge that new opportunities have opened up for a relatively small minority of blacks who are prepared to benefit from easier access to college, white collar jobs and green lawns in suburbia. But the great mass of black people remain as poor, unhealthy, ill-housed and inadequately educated as they were a decade ago.

Negroes still have a median family income only 60 per cent as large as whites. Their unemployment rate still is twice as high as that of whites. Most urban blacks still live in overcrowded, rat-infested slum apartments for which they pay exorbitant rents. A black mother is four times as likely to die in childbirth as a white mother. A black baby has less than half the chance of a white baby to live until its first birthday.

The list of black grievances could be lengthened indefinitely: too little protection and too much harassment from the police; inferior schools where their children are, in the words of one parent, "programmed for failure;" urban transportation systems that cater to white men who commute by car from the suburbs and condemn Negro workers to long and circuitous bus rides with many transfers.

But the bitterest gall in the Negro's cup is the conviction that he is now fighting his battle alone. The federal government, which he so long counted as his ally, now seems to him an enemy. And the white liberals who once espoused his cause have turned their attention to Vietnam, campus strife and air pollution.

Nixon Despised

For many blacks, President Nixon has become a personal symbol of the white community's indifference or hostility toward black aspirations.

"Black people despise Nixon, and his attorney general (John N. Mitchell) even more so," said Los Angeles attorney Halvor T. Miller Jr. "I haven't met a black man yet who approves of Nixon. Even his Republicans won't defend him."

The latter point was tacitly confirmed by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R—Mass., only black man in the U.S. senate. Brooke, who campaigned for Nixon in 1968, said Nixon has made "a cold, calculated political decision" to slow down the drive for school integration in order to win white votes.

"He said he wanted to bring us together, but everything he has done so far appears to be designed to push whites and blacks farther apart," Brooke said.

Although Negroes feel Nixon has retreated on civil rights, their chief complaint against him is that there is an economic recession from which black people are suffering more than anyone else.

"It's jobs my people are most upset about," said Alex McKinnon, a waiter in Washington, D.C. "They see unemployment rising and they know black workers will be the first laid off."

By official figures, the overall unemployment rate rose in April to 4.8 per cent while the unemployment rate for blacks rose to 8.7 per cent.

But these national averages are misleading. In many black ghettos, from 30 to 50 per cent of the employable adults either are unable to find fulltime jobs or are working at jobs paying less than $60 a week. Recent layoffs by the auto industry in Detroit and the aerospace industry in Los Angeles have returned to streetcorner idleness thousands of men who had been rescued from the ranks of "hard-core unemployed" through highly publicized industry training programs launched after the riots of the 60s.

Black teenagers have an even harder time finding jobs than adults. Many of them have enrolled in government-sponsored job training programs with high hopes, only to discover upon graduation that union restrictions, employer prejudice or simply a lack of openings kept them from getting jobs.

"I'm getting mighty worried about the young people around here," said a black police captain in Harlem. "They figure there's no future for them anyway, so what's the use going to school? So they drop out. Then they start using drugs to escape from the real world into a dream world. After that, their only ambition is to hustle (steal) enough money to keep themselves in a narcotic fog."

Black demonstrator arrested in Seattle

Black Panthers

The more militant black youths scorn what they call "The drug cop-out." Although they too have despaired of ever making it under the present system, their solution is to change the system by violent revolution or, if that proves impossible, to plunge society into such chaos that blacks and whites at least will be equal in misery.

The revolutionary organization that gets the most publicity, and stirs the strongest fear reaction among whites, is the Black Panther party. A recent Harris Poll showed that two out of three white people regard the Black Panthers as "a serious menace to the country."

The Panthers I interviewed were delighted to be taken so seriously. But it is my impression that the actual strength of the party is considerably less than the commonly-quoted official estimate of 2,000 members nationwide.

Aside from having a knack for inflammatory rhetoric that gives whites the shudders, the Panthers are important mainly as a symbol of armed black resistance to white police power. There is widespread sympathy for them within the black community, but it seems to stem primarily from a belief that they have been subjected to murderous persecution. "Frankly, the police raids are keeping the Panthers in business," said a Los Angeles sympathizer.

Arms Stockpiled

The more serious black revolutionaries operate with greater secrecy and sophistication than the Black Panthers. They also have stockpiles of arms, but they have no intention of using them "prematurely" in sporadic shoot-outs with police.

They are understandably wary of discussing their plans with white reporters, but if assured of anonymity some will speak vaguely of a new type of urban guerrilla warfare, employing bombs and arson to disrupt vital public facilities such as electric power plants.

"The more industrialized a society, the more vulnerable it is to sabotage," said a young black in Cleveland.

Black moderates — meaning those, however militant, who are still committed to working within the system — say the advocates of armed revolution are still a relatively small minority, probably under 10 per cent of the total Negro population of 23 million.

But they are concerned about the growing acceptance, especially among the young, of the idea that the Negro's choice lies between violence and a retreat into docile acceptance of second class citizenship, which burgeoning black pride will no longer tolerate.

"Black youths have become far more radical in their thinking in the past two years," said the Rev. Dr. Hubert G. Locke, a popular black professor and chaplain to students at Wayne State University in Detroit.

"Nixon has emasculated the moderate black leadership. He has destroyed the credibility of those of us who have tried to convince black youth that we can make progress through orderly and peaceful procedures."

The radicalization of young blacks — and of many who are not so young — was visibly accelerated by the police gunfire that killed eight blacks during recent disturbances in Augusta, Ga., and Jackson, Miss.

"There's no use talking any more about sitting down with white people and working out our problems," said Grady Abrams, a black school teacher who is a member of the Augusta city council. "The time has come for blacks to seek their freedom the same way the people of colonial America did — by violence if necessary."

Black fears in every community tend to focus on the police department, which is frequently viewed as an agency through which white society enforces the repression of blacks. Even in cities such as Los Angeles and Detroit, where massive efforts have been made to improve police-community relations, many blacks remain convinced that the police are eager to gun them down or beat them up if given half an excuse.

The recruitment of more black police, vigorously pursued by some cities since the riots of the 60s, has not yet succeeded in altering the public image of the police as a mainly-white force. Detroit has more than doubled the proportion of black men in its police department since its 1967 riot, but the department remains 90 per cent white while the city's population is about 40 per cent black.

In several cities, racial tensions have developed between white and black police. In Los Angeles, councilman Bradley said, "We've had incidents in which black and white police officers have drawn guns on each other during quarrels over mistreatment of black citizens."

There is considerable anxiety among black moderates about the possibility that racial antagonisms, building up on both sides, may reach the flash point.

"We haven't had a real race riot in the United States in nearly three decades," Dr. Locke said. "The ghetto rioting during the 60s was not blacks against whites, but have-nots against the system. A race riot means white people and black people killing each other in a wanton fury of mutual fear and hatred. It would be the very worst thing that could happen in America."

'Too Many Killed'

In many communities across the nation, black people are arming to defend themselves. Prominent Negro professional men took the lead in organizing armed defense squads in Jackson, Miss., after the killing of two students at Jackson State College.

"We know this is a hell of a thing to be doing," said Dr. Aaron Shirley, a physician, "but we've seen too many of our people killed and nothing done. From now on, when law enforcement officers are hell bent on killing some black folks, they'll do it at some risk to their own lives."

To moderate black leaders, such as Urban League director Whitney Young Jr., it is sheer madness to even talk about race war. Blacks are so heavily outnumbered, he said, that any large outbreak of racial fighting would be "a massacre, not a war."

However "enraged" black people may be, Young said, they must in the interest of survival try to avoid violence, and concentrate their energies on "building black economic, political and brain power."

THE SUN
An Editorial

Was that a great, roaring hip-hip-hurrah we heard for new Quebec premier Robert Bourassa for cancelling 16 official junkets to Europe planned by provincial officials?

Well, we should think so! Maybe young Mr. Bourassa's example won't be so popular with the rest of this country's politicians and senior civil servants in what may be the best boon-doggling year of our history, but if it doesn't make him the darling of the suffering masses, something's wrong somewhere.

Now, it's a pretty dumb servant who can't cook up a fairly plausible reason for hitting the world's spas, meccas and fleshpots on the people's purse. There are always bridges to be built, fences to be mended, prestige to be maintained, investment to be wooed, contracts to be initialed and you name it.

And to varying degrees, the Asian travels of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his entourage, Premier Bennett and his, and even the gallivanting members of Vancouver city council with whatever hangers-on they've been able to collect, can be shown to be solidly in the public interest.

But holy auditor-general! — in this day of economic desperation when all roads to fiscal sanity seem to lead to

TRUDEAU whoops it up in New Zealand

Think of the savings to British Columbia, a province worth singling out if only because its hospitals may no longer be solvent enough to guarantee patients clean bedsheets.

Mr. Bennett is on a state visit to the Orient with, if Canadian Press has correctly counted heads, his wife and two sons, Lands and Forests Minister Williston and Mines Minister Richter and their wives, and at least two senior civil servants, if not more. Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell is off studying municipal financing in Florida and California, the lucky fellow, and Agriculture Minister Shelford will soon be on his way to Russia, of all places, to look at farm collectives, of all things.

As for Recreation Minister Kiernan, common decency demands that he stay grounded until he at least wears off the tan acquired during his recent travel promotion trip to Fiji.

Our idea is that Mr. Trudeau, who is so frequently to be found abroad anyway, should be enlisted as British Columbia's proxy travelling ambassador and all-purpose bon vivant in these difficult times.

Instead of dating strange chicks he could wine and dine Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Williston and Mrs. Richter, let us say, thus sparing their busy husbands the necessity of making trips on the public expense account at all.

It would take a relatively inexpensive detour of those new, multi-million-dollar state jets to put Mr. Trudeau in Miami or Los Angeles, where he could pick up Mr. Campbell's brief on municipal financing.

As for the dope on Communist farm collectives, the prime minister probably could fill in Mr. Shelford without getting out of the jet stream at all. Whenever there was need for Vancouver aldermen to appear en masse at a far Cathay bazaar, Mr. Trudeau could handily broadcast greetings as he flew overhead.

We still haven't ironed out the wrinkles of Mr. Trudeau sitting in for the RCMP Musical Ride. But we're working on it.

Talks Sought On Refusal To Sell Cement

NORTH COWICHAN — North Cowichan council will seek talks with Attorney-General Peterson on the inability of local independent building contractors to get cement from the B.C. Cement Co. plant at Bamberton.

Council also decided Wednesday to ask the company to supply material to the contractors.

The company's reasons were that there was no market for cement because of the construction lockout, he said.

"They left without the cement, while at the same time a barge destined for the United States was being loaded with thousands of tons of cement," he said. "I think that is wrong."

"Maybe it is time the provincial cabinet took a look at the entire labor situation," said Ald. Margaret Robertson. "We are not supporting the union or management. The whole situation is a crisis, and I think we are involved."

PROTECTION FOR SWIMMERS

NORTH COWICHAN — North Cowichan council Wednesday moved to protect swimmers from motorboats and water skiers at Quamichan Lake.

It agreed to move a boat launching ramp about 75 feet to allow a float line to protect swimmers from boats.

Ald. Margaret Robertson said the situation at the lake last weekend was "a shambles."

LOFFMARK DOESN'T BUDGE

Frame Construction Adequate

DUNCAN — Health Minister Ralph Loffmark underlined another aspect of the provincial government's drive for greater economy in the hospital field when he spoke here Wednesday night.

He told a joint meeting of the regional hospital district of Cowichan Valley and the Chemainus, Cowichan district and Ladysmith hospital boards that the government believes frame construction for extended care hospitals is completely adequate.

"We cannot ask people to pay for a hospital that is of a much higher quality than their own home," he said.

The government laid down guidelines a year ago which set cost limits of $13,000 a bed for concrete construction and $10,000 a bed for frame construction in extended care hospitals.

These guidelines are under review and Loffmark's statements here indicate proposals for concrete construction are not likely to meet with favorable response from the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, the government agency screening hospital proposals.

The hospital region here has proposed an extended care hospital of either concrete or frame construction.

On the question of concrete construction, the health minister said:

"If you want to have this extravaganza, God bless you, but I cannot waste my time on the matter. There is just not that kind of money in Canada anymore."

This Space Taken . . . By Sparrows

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN—Mr. and Mrs. Ken Berkey of Duncan are trying to determine what would attract over 50 swallows to nest under the eaves of their house.

"About four weeks ago we were eating breakfast and we saw all these birds," said Mrs. Berkey. "We couldn't figure it out. Now the swallows have built nests all around the house."

Mrs. Berkey said they had moved the house on to the property about a year ago.

"We checked with the former owner and he said they never had swallows before. When we moved in there was one nest."

Berkey did put up a bird house but the swallows have ignored it.

★ ★ ★

The couple said they find their fine-feathered friends quite interesting.

"I have to wash my windows every day," said Mrs. Berkey while discussing the disadvantages. "It isn't safe to go outside without an umbrella."

A similar situation exists at the University of British Columbia where more than 500 cliff swallows have built nests on the cavities of the outer walls of the new faculty of dentistry building.

POLL SHOWS WILSON IN FRONT

'Dachau' Charge Rocks U.K. Election

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — The latest opinion poll keeps Prime Minister Wilson firmly in front in the campaign for the general election Thursday, June 18, but two explosive issues have been injected which can turn the sluggish debate into a more unpredictable dogfight.

One is a sudden vicious personal attack on Tory maverick Enoch Powell, whose demand that colored immigrants be sent home is described by Technology Minister Anthony Wedgwood Benn as "evil," "filthy" and "obscene."

The Labor minister loosened the strongest personal attack heard in a British campaign in recent history, suggesting that the political flag Powell has raised over his Wolverhampton constituency "is beginning to look like the one that fluttered over Dachau and Belsen," two Nazi concentration camps.

The Wedgwood Benn charges, which brought a tight-lipped response from Powell that he is still the same man who fought Nazism in 1939, appeared to embarrass the Labor party today.

Defence Secretary Denis Healey, facing a news conference on behalf of Wilson, said the party is united in its detestation of Powellism but he, personally, would not have used Wedgwood Benn's words.

INFLATION PROBLEM

The second big issue is that Labor appears to be hinting that it is just as worried as some of its opponents about Britain's zooming inflation. Wilson assured an audience Wednesday night that he isn't thinking of reimposing wage and price restraints but Home Secretary James Callaghan, a former finance chief, said the spiral is causing "a measure of concern" and this is "where attention must be given after the election."

Conservative leader Edward Heath, trailing in the personality polls and still failing to make any major impact on his audiences, has hammered away at the argument that if Wilson is re-elected, new wage and price controls would be imposed because the administration has no other way of dealing with the inflation crisis.

Both the socialists and the Tories have traded charges that election of their opponents would mean higher taxes and higher prices for housewives.

Meanwhile, the polls keep on giving Labor a lead, the latest in The Daily Mail showing a national opinion poll survey of a 5.1-per-cent lead for the party. On this basis Wilson would have a majority of about 58 seats in the 630-seat House of Commons, compared with a majority of 61 at dissolution of Parliament.

Standing in the House of Commons when the election was called were: 'Labor 343, Conservative 263, Liberal 13, Republican Labor 1, Welsh Nationalist 1, Scottish Nationalist 1, Independent Unity 1, Independents 2, vacant 2, Speaker and two deputy Speakers 3.

Family Allowance Increase Suggested to Tax Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — The government ought to couple a sharp increase in family and youth allowances with the elimination of income tax exemptions for dependent children, the Canadian Welfare Council said today.

In a critique of the white paper on taxation, the national voice of welfare institutions said it questions the use of deductions as a means of helping families with children.

The brief, presented to the Senate committee on banking, trade and commerce, said:

"Family allowances are a more satisfactory method of recognizing family economic responsibilities for children than tax exemptions which provide little or no recognition of family size among lower income families, and are completely useless to people who pay no taxes."

In line with its family allowance thinking, the council opposed special exemptions for the elderly, the blind and wheel-chair cripples because it does not help many in the low-income group.

The $100 standard exemption for charitable donations and medical expenses should be eliminated because it gives a tax advantage to those who do not incur these costs.

Also, it says the Income Tax Act should be extended to permit deductions for any health care expenditure, not covered under a private or public plan, that is incurred at the direction of a doctor.

Besides family allowances, other social benefits such as unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation, war disability pensions and sickness cash benefits should all be taxed as long as benefits are increased so that low-income people suffer no hardship.

The council favors the proposed capital gains tax, but objects to white paper proposals for reductions in personal income tax for upper-income people. The proposed 50-per-cent maximum, more than a 30-per-cent drop from the existing maximum, is not high enough.

Another council point is that the government is frustrating intelligent and comprehensive discussion of the white paper by not making public the white paper on social security, which is inter-related.

Record Stay In Space Seen

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union's two Soyuz 9 cosmonauts today seemed headed for a record stay in space while testing systems for future space stations.

The spacecraft with Col. Andrian Nikolayev and Vitali Sevastyanov aboard has already completed 38 orbits and travelled more than 625,000 miles since its blastoff Monday.

The designer of Soyuz 9, whose name was not disclosed, told the Communist newspaper Pravda in an interview today that one of the flight's tasks "is to work out systems which will be used on future ships and orbiting stations, and to test new systems."

While the United States continues to aim for the moon, the Russians have made it clear their top priority remains the building of space stations as a space base camp.

After shaving and having breakfast Wednesday, the two cosmonauts went through an experimental work routine with differing weight loads while their blood pressure and pulse were monitored.

The medical tests are part of research into how the human body stands up to orbital flight —a key factor in the long-term manning of orbitting space stations. This has prompted speculation that Nikolayev and his flight engineer may stay aloft for a prolonged period. One unofficial Soviet source predicted Wednesday it might be as long as two weeks.

Former MP, Judge Dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Paul-Emile Cote, Quebec Superior Court judge and former MP for Montreal Verdun, died Wednesday after a lengthy illness. He was 60.

Mr. Justice Cote resigned from his judicial post last October because of illness.

He was first elected to the Commons in 1945 and left active politics when appointed to the bench in 1954. In 1966, he was appointed chairman of the Canada and Quebec pension appeal boards.

He is survived by his wife, the former Laurence Gauthier, and 10 children. Funeral services will be Saturday.

Complaint Bugs Her

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A seretary in the Indiana attorney-general's office shook the contents out of a bulging envelope and screamed. The envelope contained a half-inch thick piece of wood literally crawling with termites, along with a complaint about a termite-eradication firm which didn't do its job.

Labor Group Seeks Probe Into B.C. 'Cement Monopoly'

By AB KENT

The building trades unions will press for an investigation into the "cement monopoly," whatever the outcome of the seven-week-old construction lockout.

John Schibli, secretary of Vancouver Island Building Trades Council — most of whose affiliates are locked out by Construction Labor Relations Association — told Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night:

"Even when this thing is over the building trades are going to press for an investigation into the cememt monopoly."

He referred to pleas for action by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson and a challenge of combines legislation by MPs T. C. Douglas and David Anderson.

'DRON IN DEMAND'

B.C. Cement Co., of Bamberton, the operating company of Ocean Cement Ltd., closed its domestic cememt supplies shortly after the lockout, claiming a drop in demand for cement products.

Despite union and small contractor requests to make cement available, the company has refused, but continues to fill export orders.

The building trades, of whom some 35,000 are estimated to be directly and indirectly affected by the lockout, claim the lockout itself would have been ineffective without the co-operation of cement suppliers.

STUDY STRATEGY

Schibli reported the building trades had not yet approached the Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers' Union to seek their participation, but that joint strategy to halt the export of cement is being considered.

Carpenters delegate Larry Tickner told delegates the trades should be seeking their own, perhaps permanent, sources of cement and ought to be setting up batch plants.

"We are in for a long fight," he said, suggesting that if independent sources are found, there may be no need for the domestic suppliers after the battle is over.

He pointed to a period in trade union history around the turn of the century when the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners was in dispute with the Portland Cement Co., which had cut off supplies in an attempt to break the union.

The brotherhood found a source of cement in Belgium and imported its requirements, he said.

Schibli noted that some quantities of cement are available to independent contractors from outside sources, and gave as an example one buyer who had cement originating from Bamberton, bought in the U.S. and delivered at less than the price he would have had to pay locally.

He said this proved the cement makers stick together.

COST PROHIBITIVE

Other sources have indicated that the cost of importing cement from Alberta or the U.S. is prohibitive because of duty or freight charges.

A delegate from Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, whose union is affected by the shutdown of ready-mixed concrete trucks, noted the movement to have cement stocks reopened.

But since all the aggregate required for Ocean Cement's Victoria ready-mix operation is brought in by scow and towboat, he said, this would be considered hot because of the towboat strike.

Tickner said there were plenty of other sources available from which supplies could be trucked.

DEMONSTRATION

"Most jobs could be going if we had cement," Tickner said, whether ready-mix trucks were going or not.

Meanwhile, the locked out trades are planning a demonstration on Wharf Street in front of Ocean Cement's offices Friday at 11 a.m.

And the Duncan local of the carpenters union is helping to organize a cavalcade to Bamberton Tuesday pressing for the sale of cement to local contractors, who are expected to join in the demonstration.

From there, the cars were to be driven to Victoria for a confrontation with provincial cabinet members.

Victoria Job Market 'Unique'

The only time Canada Manpower has trouble referring job applicants is for positions requiring special skills, a Manpower spokesman said Tuesday.

In all other cases, Manpower has files of names of persons eager to find work.

John Atcheson, information officer for Manpower's Victoria office at 1415 Vancouver, said the Victoria job market is unique for a large city because it has few manufacturing industries which could employ non-skilled workers and give them on-the-job training.

The city's major employers, he said, are provincial, federal and municipal governments. This includes the school system and university.

UNIQUE FEATURE

Atcheson said another unique feature of the Victoria job market is that most local businesses are locally owned. This means that they can fill openings within a circle of family and close friends, reducing the chances of outsiders finding work.

He said the only way to provide a more flexible job market in Victoria is through secondary manufacturing. But he suggested most Victorians might not like this because it would alter the quiet pace and character for which the city is famous.

Many people believe Canada Manpower actually gets jobs for people, he said. This is not true.

Manpower is a referral agency. The responsibility of getting a job rests with the applicant, Atcheson said.

NOT EFFECTIVE

Many people talk themselves out of jobs they are qualified for, he said, by not presenting their qualifications in the most effective manner.

He gave a tip that anyone interviewing for work, no matter how routine the job, should present a prospective employer with a resume of all positive factors in his background.

This means all work experience, special skills and interests. Atcheson said many employers find they have to dig at an applicant to find out what he can do. A resume, he said, would give both persons something to talk about.

Travellers Look to City For Leaders

A Victoria couple has been chosen to head two branches of the Order of United Commercial Travellers in B.C., Washington and Oregon.

Kenneth King, manager of Hotel Douglas, president of Victoria Downtown Business Association, director of Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau, member of the B.C. Alliance of Businessmen and a Salvation Army fund raiser, was chosen grand counsellor at a UCT Portland convention at the weekend.

His wife Beverley was elected grand counsellor of the order's ladies' auxiliary at the same meetings. She had been senior counsellor of the Victoria Auxiliary in 1961-62 and a member of the branch 14 years.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Copper Corp. Ltd. reports net income of $10 million or $1.58 a share, for the year ended Feb. 28, compared with $6.79 million or $1.27 a share, in the previous year.

Gross revenue was up to $30.9 million from $24.8 million. Retained earnings were $18.7 million, compared to $12 million for the year ended Feb. 28, 1969.

President Patrick M. Reynolds struck out at the white paper on tax reform in the annual report.

Silver Mark

An offering of rights to shareholders of Silver Mark Mines Ltd. has produced $100,000 for exploration of silver-lead-zinc-tungsten property at Watson Lake.

By spending $400,000 by the end of 1972, Silver Mark can earn 65 per cent interest in the prospect, on which an option was granted by Monarch Metal Mines Ltd.

A minimum 7,000 feet of diamond drilling will be done in the first phase of the undertaking.

Montreal Bank

A 27.6 per cent increase in the balance of revenue for the six months ended April 30 is reported by the Bank of Montreal.

A figure of $52.9 million, or $1.55 a share is given as the current balance, but in the next period a drop of $3.5 million in gross revenue is expected with elimination of charges on domestic cheques. This could affect earnings for the six months ending Oct. 31, said chairman Arnold G. Hart.

After-tax balance of profit amounted to $24.97 million, compared with $19.54 million in the period last year.

Operating expenses were up, largely due to deposit interest costs.

Hyrdocarbons

Net earnings rose 21 per cent from $2.3 million to $2.8 million (54 cents vs. 49 cents) in the three months ended March 31, said Canadian Hydrocarbons Ltd. and its subsidiaries.

Gross operating revenue was $20 million against $14.6 million in the period a year ago, up 38 per cent.

Following a policy of expansion in the U.S., the company secured a total 126 petroleum marketing outlets, including propane, gasoline and oil in the four northern states of Montana, North Dakota, Idaho and Washington, operated by Westland Oil Co., and Big West Oil Co. Both also have refineries.

PHOENIX, Arix. (AP) — The president of a nationwide business stood above this city's busiest street Tuesday and threw $1,00 0out the window.

L. S. Shoen, president of Amerco Systems, was only making a point to his top executives.

"I wanted them to realize that throwing cash away by throwing it into the street is no different than throwing money away by spending it on something that doesn't do anything but make the executive feel better," he explained.

The money, in bills ranging from $1 to $100, fluttered from the 11th floor onto Central Avenue, causing a brief traffic jam and at least one fight among those who stopped to pick it up.

Financial Giant, Mellon, 70, Dies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Richard King Mellon, one of the United States' leading businessmen and financiers, died Wednesday at the age of 70. For three decades he guided one of the country's greatest family fortunes.

A spokesman for the family said Mellon entered the hospital Saturday after feeling ill for several days. His death was unexpected, but probably was the result of heart failure, the spokesman said.

There are no public figures on the wealth of he Mellons. But Fortune magazine once estimated it at $3,000,000,000. That would make them richer than the Rockefellers with a fortune probably exceeded only by J. Paul Getty.

Mellon, who lived most of his life at the family's preserve in Ligonier in Westmoreland County, Pa., slowly, but not completely, gave up in later years the reins of a family dynasty which controlled eight of the United States' largest corporations.

HAD BIG HOLDINGS

The vast corporate empire Mellon never quite let go of includes:

- Gulf Oil Corp., the world's 10th largest company in sales. The Mellons control 25 per cent of the common stock, with a market value of $1,900,000,000.
- The Aluminum Co. of America. The family owns 30 per cent of the stock, worth about $490,000,000.
- The Mellon National Bank and Trust Co. The family's equity is about $200,000,000.

The Mellons also control 20 per cent of the Koppers Co., the Carborundum Co., the First Boston Corp. and the General Reinsurance Corp. In addition, Richard Mellon holds one of the largest shares in General Motors with about $20,000,000 in stock.

Mellon poured millions into Pittsburgh's educational, scientific, civic and conservation activities. Typically, however, there are no figures on how much the charities total. One estimate is $700,000,000 since the Second World War.

High Speed Phone Link Initiated

TORONTO (CP) — The Trans-Canada Telephone System announced Wednesday it is starting a new system called Multicom, designed to meet the needs of data processing users by providing high-speed transmission of information.

Chairman Z. H. Krupski told a news conference the system is "tailor-made to the needs of the computer industry."

The idea is to permit customers to transmit data to and from computers, which can be miles away. By doing this, many users can call on one computer and share the cost.

The telephone system will act as the transmitting agent, providing the equipment at the sending and receiving end and the necessary circuits.

Three high-speed systems will be offered for a start. Later, two additional medium-range speeds are to be added.

1,000 WORDS A SECOND

The high-speed units will transmit up to 1,000 words a second, or 60,000 words a minute. That is about the size of seven full-size newspaper pages. Krupski said the target is for 10 or 20 users in the first year of operation and 70 in the second year for the high-speed units.

Prospective users are corporations with many branch offices, banks, trust companies, stock brokers and insurance companies.

For installation of equipment in the user's office, there will be a local circuit or loop charge of $300 monthly, plus an additional equipment rental charge of $275 monthly.

Cost of circuits will be on a pay-for-use basis. A call from Vancouver to Toronto, for instance, would cost about $8. But the user could pay as little as 80 cents—the six-second minimum charge.

The Trans-Canada Telephone System comprises the country's eight major telephone companies.

$ EXCHANGE

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was down 3-16 to $1.03 3-16. Pound sterling was down 5-16 to $2.47 9-16.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Basic Facts Illustrated

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

The current release of the Canadian dollar from its former fixed exchange rate may be viewed as a good move, or a bad move dependent upon one's political, geographic and economic viewpoint.

In any event the change does serve to illustrate some basic facts again and help us to avoid losing sight of the simple truths of money and business.

A controlled exchange rate can, and does, prevent the business community, and the public from being aware of the changing realistic value of our currency which occurs day by day upon the world market regardless of whether the exchange rate is free or fixed.

When the change in real value from the fixed rate becomes too wide to be covered by government purchase or sale of our currency then the fixed rate must be unfixed. Whether this should be done at this particular time is a two-sided argument in political and in economic theory. But the fact that it will occur at some time is inescapable because, even if we did not ever release the controls on our own currency, other countries would eventually change their exchange values and so those other currencies would change in value in relation to ours which is the same effect as ours changing in relation to theirs.

VALUES CHANGE

Values of all things do change, and will always continue to change, so no matter how much we may wish to stem the tide we will be bound to face the inevitable just as the historical legend tells is that King Canute did so many years ago.

There is a further truism which the current change points out. The Canadian dollar and the U.S. dollar are two different monetary units and the primary point of similarity is the unfortunate co-incidence of being called by the same name.

It is confusing and often misleading to regard the value of Canadian dollars as if it were a discount or a premium from par of the U.S. dollar. The two dollars are not the same thing and the difference in value is just that, a difference, in the same way that a pound of butter is different in value from a dozen eggs.

Unfortunately many accountants overlook this difference and do add Canadian and U.S. dollars together as if they were the same except for an "exchange premium." Then they treat the value difference as it it were some sort of administration expense and thereby mislead the reader into thinking that the currency exchange difference is within the control of management.

SILLY PROBLEMS

Now that the difference in value between the two currencies is reduced there will be even more tendency to pretend it is something else. With the fluctuating rate this will certainly lead to many silly problems within the accounting departments of our import and export businesses and cause a lot of unnecessary confusion. No one tries to play the same games with the sterling U.K. currency because they still use the three column method of money units in pounds, shillings and pence.

For a few months at least, or may be a few years, we shall now have another index to watch and keep the prognosticators busy with guessing about the moves and the implications of the currency market.

43 Nobelists Urge Nixon To End War

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

In an extraordinary appeal, 43 U.S. Nobel Laureates have declared that the nation's health "depends on a swift disengagement" from the Indochinese war.

The signers, most of them honored for their contributions to life sciences, told the White House that its military actions "have further aggravated the already severe and unhealthy political division within our country."

They expressed their alarm in a letter sent to President Nixon on May 28 and made public Wednesday. The scientists urged Nixon to "rise to the heroism that these times demand and take swift and decisive steps to restore a unity of vision and purpose."

"We believe," they said, "this necessitates a rapid termination of U.S. participation in the Southeast Asia war."

The signers, three-fourths of the 57 Nobelists in science residing in the United States, included some of the best known scholars in the country. Among them were Hans Bethe, Murray Gell-Mann, Linus Pauling, Harold C. Urey, George Wald, James D. Watson and A. Gobind Khorana.

The The scientists carefully separated themselves from violent tactics to oppose the war, saying that these are "repugnant to us."

However, they wrote that they were "increasingly troubled" by the war's effect on the young, particularly the most promising students.

These, the scientists said, have turned away from the educational system "to the streets, to jail, and to exile in opposition to the war."

Like the young, the signers said, they can not justify the "apparent inconsistencies" in official explanations and actions regarding the war.

NO DISGRACE

At a press conference here, Edward L. Tatum, a 1958 Nobelist in medicine attached to Rockefeller University, said that he knew of no non-signing Nobelist who disagreed with the substance of the letter.

Some, he said, could not be reached because they were out of the country. Others objected to phrases in the letter and a few thought it was not strong enough.

Dr. Tatum told a reporter that the appeal was precipitated by the assault on Cambodia and the killings at Kent State and Jackson State. "We became concerned over the disunity and the increasing polarization in the country," he said.

The original impetus for the letter came from two Nobelists at the University of California in Berkeley, Owen Chamberlain and Charles H. Townes.

STARTED IN MAY

Dr. Tatum said that the Berkeley scientists began circulating a draft of the appeal in the middle of May and it found a quick and ready response.

He and his colleagues could recall only two previous petitions by American Nobelists. One, in 1956, urged the Russians to withdraw from Hungary.

The second, in 1963 asked Pope Paul to support measures of population control. Neither, it was believed, drew the support of the war appeal.

Copies of the letter were sent to Nixon's science adviser, Lee Du Bridge. Neither he nor the president has yet responded to the appeal.

BASQUE PRIESTS JAILED

MADRID — Nine Basque Catholic priests have been sent to prison without trial by a Spanish military court, informed sources in Bilbao in northern Spain revealed Wednesday. The priests allegedly informed their congregations from the pulpit about the hunger strikes of rebellious clergymen in the Zamora prison in northern Spain.

The priests, sentenced to from one to four months' imprisonment, refused to testify and claimed that military court has no authority to try them. One of the convicted priests, Rev. Amastasio Olavarria, is a close adviser to Monsignor Cirarda, the bishop of Bilbao.

Spanish Minister for Justice Antonio Oriol had said that "relations between the government and the Episcopal conference are most cordial." The minister said that only 14 priests were serving prison sentences in all of Spain.

But Basque sources claim that there are at least 39 priests in the Zamora prison, 34 of them belonging to the separatist Basques. The military court which sentenced Father Olavarria and his colleagues did so under the emergency decree regarding banditry and terrorism, which is aimed at suppressing the Basque nationalist movement in northern Spain.

Pharmacists Plan Meeting

Douglas M. Crosby, well-known Victoria pharmacist and former owner of Royal Oak Drugs, will attend the pharmacy convention in Kelowna June 16-19.

The convention, which will incorporate the annual meetings of the B.C. Pharmaceutical Association and the B.C. Professional Pharmacists' Society, will be preceded by a four-day meeting of the association's council in Vancouver. The association is the licensing and regulatory body for B.C.'s 1,500 pharmacists and 540 retail and hospital pharmacies.

Crosby, a member of council for the past three years, is chairman of the association's discipline committee.

WOMAN SENTENCED TO FOUR MONTHS

'Attitude Your Biggest Enemy'

Leslie Marie Viszket, 20, address unknown, was sentenced Wednesday by Judge William Ostler to four months in prison on each of three counts of false pretences over $50, to be served concurrently.

She pleaded guilty May 25 to the offences which involved using three credit cards of her fellow employees to obtain goods from Eaton's, The Bay and Woodwards worth more than $1,600. The offences occurred during April and May.

The merchandise included clothing, records, make-up, jewellery and art supplies.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had a previous conviction for dishonesty and he described the actions of Mrs. Viszket with the credit cards as "wilful and wicked" and "totally irresponsible."

Ostler told the accused that her life would be so much happier and simpler if she considered others rather than always herself.

He said her attitude was her biggest enemy and added that she was the author of her own misfortune.

Violet Ann Weed, 21, of 547 Niagara, was fined $300 when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting. She was observed taking several items from The Bay Valued at $18.94 and leave without paying for them.

★ ★ ★

Robert Randolph Burnham, 24, of 2853 Graham, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

A partially-smoked marijuana cigarette was found by police in the accused's jacket pocket May 24 when it was searched in his home.

The accused produced a plastic bag containing more of the substance when asked if he had any more.

Poverty Blamed

OTTAWA (CP) — Bad economic conditions are a major cause of ill-health among the poor, the Canadian Nurses Association told the Senate poverty committee today.

In a brief to the committee, the association urged treatment of the cause of illness, poverty, rather than the symptoms alone. Health care costs would be reduced as poverty was removed.

The association, which has 82,000 members, said that in "sheer weight of numbers" and the nature of their work, nurses have more experience with poverty and its effects than any other group in Canada.

The poverty committee was told that more financial aid is needed to prepare nurses for community health programs. Experimental projects, such as neighborhood health programs, should be encouraged.

Care for the elderly poor should be stepped up. More programs are needed for training leaders in poor communities to work with public health agencies.

Brazil's Great Display Leaves Rivals Worried

Two-Time Champs Crush Czechs in First Match

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Brazil swept to a brilliant 4-1 soccer victory over Czechoslovakia Wednesday and its 15 rivals in the World Cup championships here immediately were faced with this problem: "How do we stop Brazil."

The Brazilians, winners of the Jules Rimet Trophy in 1958 and 1962, are gunning for a third victory and permanent possession of the bauble which indicates world soccer supremacy.

The three other contests on the Wednesday schedule ended this way: Italy 1, Sweden 0; West Germany 2, Morocco 1; Belgium 3, El Salvador 0.

Now the soccer circus takes a break until Saturday, when a full schedule of four games will be played in the round-robin competition to whittle the teams down to eight quarter-finalists.

England, Italy, Belgium and Brazil all have injuries to key players, and the days off will give some of them time to mend.

BOTH FULLBACKS HURT

England, defending champion, has both first-string fullbacks on the limp—Keith Newton with a damaged right knee and Terry Cooper with a bruised toe. England next takes the field Sunday against Brazil in the key match of Group III.

Ladislav Petras scored for Czechoslovaika in the 12th minute before the Brazilians settled into a coherent pattern. Rivelino tied the score before half time on a free kick.

Italy just held on to edge Sweden in a Group II game after dominating the first half. The only goal was scored by Angelo Domenghini in the 11th minute, his shot from 30 yards taking Ronnie Hellstrom, Sweden's long-haired goalkeeper, by surprise.

West Germany, the losing finalist when England won the cup in 1966, trailed underdog Morocco 1-0 at half time. The goal for Morocco, first African country in 36 years to proceed to the final states of World Cup competition, was scored in the 22nd minute by Mohamed Houmane Jarir.

VETERAN TIES IT

West Germany finally got on the score sheet in the 55th minute, on veteran Uwe Seeler's goal, and won 12 minutes from the end when Gerhard Muller scored.

Belgium, rated a strong challenger to Mexico and the Soviet Union in Group I, was unimpressive in beating little El Salvador. Wilfried Van Moer was the star with two goals and Raoul Lambert got the third from a penalty.

Italy, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Morocco get back into action Saturday, Italy against the tough Uruguayans, Belgium against the formidable Russians, Czechoslovakia against Romania and Morocco against Peru.

Italian coach Ferruccio Valcareggi said after the win over Sweden: "We had thought the altitude would cause us a lot of problems but we really did not believe it could affect us so much."

Salmonbellies Crush Rocks To Pad Streak

By STEWART LANG

Victoria Shamrocks ran into big troubles Wednesday night and things could be even tougher tonight for the Irish in their Western Lacrosse Association campaign.

Playing with the advantage of their home floor, the Rocks absorbed a 14-8 defeat at the hands of New Westminster Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena and tonight they'll be working on the New Westminster floor the Salmonbellies know so well.

With their fifth straight victory, the unbeaten Salmonbellies climbed back into a share of first place with Vancouver Burrards.

For Shamrocks, playing before 1,029 Victoria fans, it was in inglorious fifth loss in six starts.

Despite an early lead, Shamrocks seemed outclassed through the entire contest in most departments — passing, shooting and defence.

Lack of power in faceoff situations hurt the home club as well, with Salmonbellies managing to win 28 of 43 draws.

Shamrocks opened scoring with 27 seconds on the clock and then mounted a 3-2 lead before 10 minutes had elapsed when brothers Ranjit and Nirmal Dillon scored 14 seconds apart.

New Westminster tied it up on a long shot by Mac Tyler at 11:24, went ahead on a goal by Barry Erlander at 11:42 and took a 5-3 lead at 13:46 on a searing shot by Jim Giles.

SPECTACULAR SAVE

Grover turned in a commendable performance despite the leaky Sharmrock defence, making 21 stops the rest of the way, including a spectacular save approximately eight minutes into the third period when Westminster's Barry Erlander managed a beakaway.

The gelling action expected from the addition of Tom Back to the defence never crystallized, except for a brief moment in the middle of the second period.

Bulky Joe Comeau, in the Salmonbellies' net, also had a fine game with 36 saves.

Ever alert, Comeau covered the angles well and managed to deprive the Shamrocks of a goal on many close shots.

He had one glaring fault, however, that Shamrocks never seemed to catch. Consistantly the New Westminster netminder would go down on shots, leaving a gap above his shoulders — and most of the Rocks shot low.

Or as co-coach Bert Bertoia of Shamrocks tersely stated:

Senator Catcher Loves Those White Sox Dates

By The Canadian Press

Catcher Paul Casanova continued his personal hitting vendetta on Chicago lefthander Tommy John Wednesday night as Washington Senators edged the White Sox 5-4 in one of five American League games.

The Washington receiver collected three hits in three official at bats for the third time in succession against John. Casanova's success against the Chicago starter lifted the Senators, holders of third place in the East Division, to a .500 record with 24 wins in 48 games.

In other American League action, Oakland Athletics tripped Baltimore Orioles 4-1, Detroit Tigers beat California Angels 5-4 in 11 innings Cleveland Indians outscored Milwaukee Brewers 7-6, New York Yankees defeated Kansas City Royals 5-3. Minnesota Twins were rained out at Boston in the only other scheduled game.

Casanova's streak against John, which started last season, includes 10 runs-batted-in.

Wednesday, he doubled for two scores in a four-run fourth inning and singled twice.

HAPPY MYSTERY

"I don't know why it happens," the Washington catcher said, "but I can hit the ball against them (the White Sox). I won a game with a homer in the ninth off Wilbur Wood last year and three years ago I won the game that went 22 innings.

"I just wish every ball club had 'Chicago' on the front of their uniform."

Duke Sims slammed two home runs for the second game in a row to power the Indians past Milwaukee. He hit a three-run homer in the first inning and connected again, with the bases empty, in the third to snap a 4-4 tie.

The Brewers, trailing 7-4, loaded the bases with one out in the ninth. But Dennis Higgins fanned Steve Hovley. Then Dick Ellsworth, relieving with a 3-0 count on Tommy Harper, won the game on a force out.

BROKE DEADLOCK

Sal Bando walloped a three-run tie-breaking homer off Baltimore's Mike Cuellar in the eighth inning to lead the As to victory. Oakland's Frank Fernandez hit a solo homer in the second while Frank Robinson matched that for the Orioles in the seventh.

Robinson's blow was one of only two hits off Oakland starter Roland Fingers, who left for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

STRIKEOUT MILESTONE

Philadelphia Phillies trounced Cincinnati Reds 11-4 Wednesday night to cut the National League West Division leaders' win string at five games as winning pitcher Jim Bunning passed a career strikeout milestone.

Bunning fanned seven Reds to move his career strikeout total past 2,700. Walter Johnson leads all righthanders with a 20-year record of 3,497.

Elsewhere in the National League Wednesday, Houston Astros clipped Montreal Expos 5-0, St. Louis Cardinals edged San Francisco Giants 6-5 and Chicago Cubs beat Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5 in 11 innings.

Larry Hisle cracked a two-run single in the Philadelphia seventh at Cincinnati to break a 4-4 tie. Hisle's winning shot came with two out after Cincinnati reliever Clay Carroll entered the game with none out and the bases loaded.

At Houston, the Expos went down to their 32nd defeat. Righthander Jack Billingham, a former team-mate, beat them.

Baseball Owners Say Reserve System Needed

NEW YORK (AP) — Three baseball club owners testified Wednesday in the Curt Flood suit they would not have invested in the sport without their belief that baseball enjoyed exemption from anti-trust laws.

Francis Dale of Cincinnati Reds and John McHale of Montreal Expos testified in the morning and Bob Reynolds of California Angels completed the day's testimony in the afternoon in federal court in New York.

The issue is a key to baseball's defence in the Flood case, the sport contending that subjecting the rules and regulations of the game—known as the reserve system—to anti-trust laws would drive away would-be investors.

Dale said he and his ownership group purchased the Reds only after checking its legal status under federal law and with the understanding that "baseball has been considered by the Supreme Court to be outside the code of anti-trust laws."

McHale said his investment in the Expos had been made with the understanding "that the Supreme Court had upheld baseball's position insofar as the reserve system was concerned and that any change would have to be made by Congress."

'SYSTEM NECESSARY'

They also were asked by baseball's chief counsel, Mark Hughes, whether they considered the reserve system reasonable and necessary to the efficient operation of the sport. Both said they did.

McHale said: "I haven't found it (the reserve system) creating any unfairness or hardship on the players I have dealt with."

He said that without the system "the player would suffer because the sport, and therefore salaries, would not be as high."

Bob Wylie Ousted In Fourth Round

NEWCASTLE, Northern Ireland (CP) — Bob Wylie of Calgary was eliminated today in the fourth round of the 1970 British amateur golf championships.

He was defeated 3 and 2 by M. Rae of Scotland.

Wylie had defeated Reg Gladding in the third round 2 and 1 and Don Brewe of England 3 and 2 in the second round. He opened the tournament Tuesday by eliminating R. E. Hannan, an American, on the 19th hole.

In other action, Hunter McDonald of Detroit, Mich., one of five Americans still in the running, squeaked through the fourth round with a 19th-hole triumph over Pat O'Sullivan of Ireland.

Michael Bonallack of England, the defending champion looking for his fifth British title, coasted home 4 and 3 over John Faith of Northern Ireland.

Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia, Pa., co-favorite with Bonallack, who beat him in the finals last year, was two up at the turn against Bill McCrae, an Irish internationalist, who plays now for England.

Two rounds today will cut the field of 32 to eight quarter-finalists by nightfall.

Second Fatality

Wild Sooke Pitches, Homers Help Century

Wild pitches and home runs helped Century Inn collect a 6-5 Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League victory over Sooke Hotel on Wednesday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Down 5-1 after Sooke packed all its runs into the fourth inning, Century came within one run in the sixth after John Hughes scored on a wild pitch and Bob Custance drove in Jim Buchan with a homer.

Hughes drove in John Paul with a single for the equalizer in the sixth inning and Don Frampton gained the victory margin with a solo homer in the seventh.

TRIALS FOR WESTERN ATHLETES

Plenty to See at Centennial Stadium

Victoria track buffs will get it coming and going this weekend.

They'll be able to see the new talent during the Vancouver Island high schools championship meet Friday and Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

They'll have a chance to observe the established talent Sunday at the stadium in a meet that is designed to bring athletes to a national standard which qualifies them for competition at the British Commonwealth Games trials at Hamilton June 20-21.

The high school championships should be a repeat of the city finals, with Mount Douglas the odds-on favorite to retain the title it has held for two years.

But in the city meet the champions just squeaked by a fresh, strong Oak Bay team that could easily charge to a win. Claremont should be third again. Victoria Secondary and Esquimalt are not considered contenders.

Talent from Duncan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni present an unknown variable, however, and victories in stategic places could unseat champions and push lesser teams to the top.

The meet gets underway Friday at 5:30 p.m. and runs through until 8:35 p.m. Heats take up most of the schedule, but finals will be run between 7:30 and 8:30 in boys' and girls' 400-metre events, boys' and girls' 100-metre events, and the boys' 1,500-metre steeplechase.

Six field event finals will also be completed, starting at 5:30.

Saturday the finals start at 12 noon and run through to the championship ceremonies at 4:10 p.m.

In the trials standards meet for Western athletes Sunday, some 250 competitors will start at 10:30 a.m. This is their last chance to make the standard for Hamilton and fierce competition is expected.

Amont the events that promise to be the most exciting, B.C. athletes are expected to make a strong showing.

Stephanie Berto and Irene Piotrowski, both with 11.7 clockings in the 100 metres, and Patti Loverock with an 11.8 should make the women's sprints some of the best run in Victoria.

And two Victoria girls should make strong challenges in the women's long jump as Lindsay Jack and Penny May go against Canadian record holder Brenda Eisler.

Former Victoria runner Anne Langdale, who trains in Vancouver, will face the 400-metre battle of her carrer when she clashes with 56.7 runner Heather McKay of Edmonton, and 57.0 competitors Ann Covell and Jane Maddin.

Stewart Says Sawchuk Persisted in Argument

RON STEWART
. . . like bad dream

NEW YORK (CP) — Ron Stewart conferred Wednesday with Nassau County District Attorney William Cahn and agreed to sign waiver of immunity from prosecution before going before a grand jury Monday to tell what he knows about the death of goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk.

Cahn said Stewart, a 37-year-old penalty-killing specialist with New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, was "very co-operative" during the meeting at Mineola, N.Y.

Also at the meeting with Cahn were Rosemary Sasso, a blonde nurse, and Nicholas Castellano, a lawyer representing Stewart.

Castellano, hired by the Rangers, fended off reporters seeking to interview Stewart. But The Post printed what it described as Stewart's first published statement about the April 29 incident which put Sawchuk, 40, in hospital for a series of operations. The goalkeeper died of a pulmonary embolism—a blood clot—in hospital here Sunday.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK (CP) — Two acquaintances of Terry Sawchuk said today the veteran National Hockey League goalie was ailing two weeks before a widely-publicized altercation with a team-mate which sent him to hospital.

Sawchuk, who died in hospital Sunday, was said by the two to have been spitting up blood.

They are Rosemary Sasso, 24, friend of Ron Stewart, fellow New York Ranger who lived with Sawchuk and who was involved in the fight with the goalie, and Ben Weiner, close friend of Sawchuk and Stewart.

The newspaper quotes Stewart as describing an argument which began in a bar at Long Beach, on Long Island, and continued on the lawn of a rented home the two men shared during the hockey season.

Stewart expressed bewilderment that Sawchuk should have suffered serious injury in a fall while the two tussled.

"He fell on me, that's for sure.

"But all his lifetime Terry took much worse falls on the ice and he always bounced back . . . and then he trips on top of me and suddenly his life is ended.

"It doesn't make sense.

"A fall like that, just like a thousand he's taken on that hard ice and nothing ever happened to him. And this thing happened, and Terry is gone. It's all like a bad dream when I lookback now."

Cahn said he believed the grand jury would be able to decide by Monday night whether to return an indictment.

In the account in The Post, Stewart said he and Sawchuk had argued about rental money and cleaning up the house before turning it back to the owner.

Stewart said that only after Sawchuk had gone to hospital did he learn about some of the things that had been "bugging" his team-mate.

"I can't tell you how sorry I am that I didn't turn away. The guy had real problems. When I think of it I'm ready to go out of my mind."

Early Bate Surge Extends Win Skein

Belief in the story about the early bird getting the worm helped Bate Construction collect a 10th straight Victoria Major Men's Softball League victory Wednesday night at Central Park.

Aided by five opposition errors, Bate batters rapped out seven hits to collect a 9-0 lead by the end of the second inning en route to an 11-4 victory over Strathcona Hotel.

Bob Labelle struck out six batters and allowed six hits for the win but needed help from Gordon Huston for the final out.

Space Between Cars Ron's Victory Route

Ron Shingler took advantage of the fact that there was only room for one car to pass between two others standing dead in the crossing of the figure-eight track Wednesday night at Western Speedway to record his first main-event victory.

Shingler spurted through the opening to victory on the final lap of the 20-lap event before a crowd of 585.

Bill Sheldrake, who led from the ninth to 19th lap, had to go around the two vehicles and settle for second place.

LEADERS TANGLE

Next attraction at Western is the ninth annual running of the Strawberry Cup open modified competition Saturday in a program shared with local stock cars.

Hill Cracks Top 10 List

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Hill, last year's runnerup, has climbed into the top 10 money list of the PGA tournament players' division.

Hill, winner of the coveted Vardon Trophy in 1969, captured the Danny Thomas - Memphis Open title last weekend to collect $30,000 to jump from 23rd on the money list to ninth with a total of $67,580.

Colleges Told to Co-Operate In Federal Scholarship Plan

BANFF, Alta (CP) — The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union was told Wednesday to co-operate in a proposed federal government athletic scholarship program on which the CIAU was not consulted.

Lou LeFaive, director of the federal fitness and amateur sports program, told the CIAU annual meeting about the proposed plan.

"It is time we attacked the problems of sport in a co-ordinated, co-operative way," LeFaive told the meeting.

At the same time, he said university athletic personnel were not consulted in the planning of the athletic scholarships and "for this I make no apology."

"We looked on it as a matter between the athletes as potential recipients, the federal government as the donor and the sports governing bodies concerned, who have considerable say on eligible athletes.

CALLED INSIGNIFICANT

"As far as we are concerned, the intercollegiate athletic program has no real significance in this particular matter."

LeFaive said a committee of eight to 10 persons including representatives of the Canadian Olympic Association, the CIAU and the federal government would be named to an athletic scholarships selection committee.

"Initial plans call for 45 grants to be presented every year with each athlete receiving awards from $2,000 to $5,000," he said in an interview.

"Total cost would be approximately $90,000."

He said the selection committee likely would be formed by June 15.

The CIAU, realizing government scholarships would be implemented, passed a motion Tuesday commending Health Minister John Munro for his recent statement of policy concerning scholarships and grants-in-aid to outstanding Canadian athletes.

They supported the initial guidelines of the paper—that assistance will not be tied to performance, that competition will not take precedence over education and that there will be complete freedom of choice of school by athletes.

LeFaive said Mr. Munro "raised a real hornets' nest" in his mention of grants-in-aid to Canadian athletes.

"The immediate assumption seems to have been here we go again on a government-sponsored program of athletic scholarships."

Elaborating on the scholarships, LeFaive said "these are not athletic scholarships as we know them."

CONCERN EXPRESSED

He said the fitness program is concerned with athletes who represent Canada in international competition.

"Many are now attending post-secondary courses and because of their long training and competitive schedules have little opportunity to raise needed funds for educational purposes."

Cedar Hill Challenging For Golf League Title

They continued their challenge for the title Wednesday night by charging into third place with a 7-2 triumph over the visiting Victoria Golf Club squad.

In other matches, Royal Colwood retained a one-point lead over Uplands after the clubs played to a 4½-4½ draw at Colwood and Glen Meadows exchanged the cellar spot with visiting Gorge Vale after handing the defending-champions a 6½-2½ loss.

Gorge's loss virtually assures that a new champion will collect the Willie Park Driver with only two rounds remaining in the round-robin competition.

Assistant-pro Bob Hogarth and City amateur champion Laurie Kerr led Cowood golfers. Hogarth had a one-under 69 to beat Bob Hunt 5 and 4 while Kerr was one over for a 6-and-5 victory over Upland's assistant-pro Don Billsborough.

TO SERVE YOU BETTER

The new Renault 12.

The compact that doesn't compact you. The first compact of the 70's that gives you economy, convenience, performance—and puts extra comfort where the others put claims.

The car-buyer of the 70's has put his requirement cards on the table.

He wants a car that costs less to buy and to run. He knows that means a smaller car. But he won't sacrifice the comfort he has become accustomed to; or the performance on which he depends.

Its purchase price is surprisingly low. And it gives you 35 miles to the gallon. The others can't even come close.

It accelerates from 0 to 60 in 15.2 seconds. That's performance. Passing power.

It's a convenient size (170 inches) for easy handling and no-problem parking. Front wheel drive combined with powerful disc brakes and radial ply tires means safe, sure handling, no matter what the road condition.

And because the Renault 12 is not just a scaled-down big car, it gives you the comfort you never thought you'd find. It doesn't compact you.

Oh sure, the others are claiming comfort. (In a rather subdued fashion.) Let's compare some of their claims to Renault 12 realities:

"2 wide doors". We have 4 wide doors. "Fits four big people". The Renault 12 has more legroom and headroom than any competitor in its category. "Optional reclining seats". In the Renault 12TL, they're standard. "Great visibility". Renault 12 glass area: 24.5 sq. ft.

And then there are the Renault 12 comfort features that the others aren't even claiming. Like a roof that rises over the rear seats — ending neck-bending. Pounds and pounds of sound-proofing — ending ear-bending. 17 cubic feet of trunk space. Arm rests on all 4 doors. Lights in glove compartment and trunk. Two-temperature heating — warm at body level, cooler at head level. Rear window defroster. Seats carved from 7½ cubic feet of foam. And more.

All included in the purchase price. Not options.

We could go on, but instead, why don't you go on down to your Renault dealer's and see for yourself. (Incidentally, there are now 175 Renault dealers with top-notch facilities — for easy, dependable service.)

Get into the 1971 Renault 12.

You may never want to leave it.

'Better Control' For Rock Festivals

It may not be feasible to arrest people who break laws in a rock festival setting but they shouldn't think "that they're immune to prosecution at a later date," Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Wednesday.

He also announced that officials of his department are working with the municipal affairs department in an effort to devise "better means of control" for rock festivals and similar gatherings.

He did not elaborate on what means might be used to obtain such control.

Peterson said a meeting Tuesday with police chiefs ended in the basic agreement "that everything possible will be done to maintain law and order."

He said the meeting recognized that there are times — such as at rock festivals or other large gatherings — when attempts to enforce the law would be detrimental to maintenance of order.

But people breaking the law under such circumstances won't be immune from prosecution, he said, adding that Tuesday night he had discouraged a Los Angeles promoter who telephoned him to discuss a proposed rock festival in the province.

Peterson said he didn't want to announce any specific plans for maintaining law and order resulting from the meeting.

He said Tuesday that he was concerned about "rock festivals, demonstrations, this type of activity" and about "situations that might arise during the course of the next few months" which might threaten law and order.

He said he defines the term "law and order" as simply the maintenance of existing laws. He specifically mentioned laws regulating liquor, drugs, vehicles and protection of property.

He said he had "nothing specific" in mind in referring to potential troubles ahead.

At one point during the interview, he chided a radio reporter for using the words "police state" in a question.

"I don't think you should refer to it as a police state," Peterson said, appearing hurt. "We live in a democracy where citizens are anxious to have law and order maintained by enforcement forces. It is an unfortunate choice of words to refer to a police state."

He said tactics, organization and equipment were discussed by the chiefs, but no specific reference to use of crowd control chemicals such as Mace was made, he said.

The equipment such as helmets and long sticks was "primarily defensive," he said, adding:

"The helmets of course are logically there to protect police as well as large sticks which aren't to strike people over the head with or to fracture skulls, but to keep the crowd back."

Peterson said the question of exchanges of police officers to meet particular needs was also discussed.

Liquor Changes Urged

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Wednesday he has recommended changes in the province's liquor laws and they are being considered by the provincial cabinet.

He said he hopes the changes will be implemented before long but couldn't set a date because cabinet approval has not yet been granted.

He made the statement after being asked whether the government regarded bringing laws up to date as being of equal importance with maintaining law and order.

Peterson said he agrees with that view.

But he declined to say what reforms have been recommended.

Premier Bennett said following the legislative session that "perhaps" there had been enough reform for the time being. The Morrow royal commission on liquor laws called for sweeping changes in its report which was tabled in the legislature in March.

Bennett's statement was made shortly after disturbances in city pubs following the extension of adult privileges, including consumption of alcohol, to 19-year-olds, May 15.

Bennett Returns, Tired

A visibly tired Premier Bennett returned to Victoria from his nine-day Japanese tour at 1 p.m. Wednesday saying "great new business" will result for British Columbia.

Bennett, who flew in from Vancouver after an exhausting flight from Hong Kong by way of Japan, said he hadn't slept for 24 hours and preferred not to go into detail about his trip.

But it was an "extremely successful" visit both from the standpoint of developing contacts with existing customers and also in stimulating new business.

"We got new customers . . . Great new business will come to B.C.," Bennett said. He said he would hold a press conference today.

Bennett was in Japan for B.C. Day at Osaka 70 and also visited Hong Kong.

Germans Overcoming Nazi Past

FRANKFURT (AP) — Twenty-five years after the collapse of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich, Germans still are attempting to come to terms with the 12 years of their Nazi past.

The moral problem of what the Germans call "die Bewaeltigung der Vergangenheit," or overcoming the past, persists although about a third of West Germany's 60,000,000 people were born after Germany's surrender in May, 1945.

Irrespective of the moral issue, the consensus seems to be that the Germans have learned from the past.

Addressing Bonn's diplomatic corps recently, West German President Gustav Heinemann said: "One should appreciate that the overwhelming majority of our citizens, in contrast to 1918, has not fallen victim to the temptations of a new short-sighted nationalism, but rather has directed itself toward thoughts of European solidarity and co-operation with the peoples of the world."

WANT PEACE

Countess Marion Doenhoff, editor-in-chief of the liberal weekly Die Zeit, put it succinctly when she looked back over 25 years and wrote: "This people has had enough of dreams of hegemony. It wants peace, security and prosperity."

Philosopher Carl Fredrich von Weizsaecker: "Germans have learned from the past politically that they are no longer a great power. This awareness is today firmly rooted in the entire people. A moral showdown with self-created injustice is difficult for all groups, thus also for all nations, the German included."

SOME DID NOT LEARN

Dr. Henrik van Dam, general secretary of the Central Council of the Jews in Germany: "Cliches must be ruled out not only because they are immoral but also because the oversimplifications resting in them falsify reality. No doubt there are Germans who did not learn from the past because they are not in the sensible condition to do so, rooted in an eternal yesterday, as it were. But there are many Germans who had the will to learn and drew the consequences by knowledge and perception. The important thing is what values an organized community, such as state and society, turn to. Rejection of right-wing radicalism by the majority and recognition of the need to keep up with modern developments indicate the Germans learned from their past."

OTTAWA APPLIES HEAT

Drug Prices Are Target

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is preparing to turn the heat on the provinces to lower the cost of prescription drugs to the consumer, reliable sources say.

The federal action is to come at a closed meeting with provincial representatives June 10.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford has assembled considerable ammunition to convince the provincial governments of the need for action, especially at the level of druggists who are provincially licensed.

An even closer look is in prospect in the wake of a sudden breaking up of the legal log-jam that held up applications for compulsory licences to import into Canada drugs protected by Canadian patents.

WEAKEN PROTECTION

Parliament last year amended the Patent Act in line with recommendations of the Harley committee that protection given to drug manufacturers be weakened to bring about lower consumer drug prices.

The Harley committee, a Commons body, was so called for its chairman, Dr. Harry Harley, former Liberal MP.

Under the Patent Act amendment, reputable drug importers or manufacturers could apply to the federal patent commissioner for a "compulsory licence" on a patent-protected drug of a rival firm. The commissioner would set a royalty and the licensee could then import the drug and sell it, provided he complied with food and drugs laws.

The first such licence was challenged in the courts by American Home Products which attempted unsuccessfully to block the granting of a licence to Inglis Pharmaceuticals Ltd., on a form of penicillin.

CASES FEW

The litigation held up granting of licences to more than a dozen other applicants in other cases until a few days ago.

With the court having upheld the licensing, 30 more were issued mainly for the biggest selling drugs—tranquilizers and antibiotics. One application was refused and another four decisions were appealed to the Exchequer Court of Canada.

As of Wednesday, 32 applications remained to be dealt with.

The federal government is expected to argue that it now is up to provincial governments to ensure that the druggists pass along to the consumer any savings that may result from cheaper imported drugs.

At the same time, Mr. Basford will raise the question of the degree to which druggists control the selection of drugs dispensed when a doctor's prescription is brought to him for filling.

The Harley committee maintained that the consumer is at a complete disadvantage, with no choice of medicine and only limited ability to shop around for the best price.

Bill to Control Arctic Pollution Clears Hurdle

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian water bill cleared the last hurdle Wednesday on the way to final Commons approval as the government defeated 11 opposition amendments.

The bill, which provides for water quality management agencies throughout Canada, was slated to receive third reading today. It then goes to the Senate.

Voting was on party lines with the Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes supporting all amendments and the Liberals opposing.

Also Wednesday, Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien told the House he hopes to visit Russia this summer to examine Soviet Arctic technology.

Speaking in debate on the government bill designed to prevent pollution of Arctic waters, Mr. Chretien said Russia seems anxious to exchange information on the Arctic.

READING STALLED

As voting ended on the water bill amendments, Resources Minister J. J. Greene moved third reading. But the final step was postponed when Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said the government "should have a night to think about the errors of their ways."

The voting lasted 40 minutes prompting James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) to ask the government to introduce electronic voting systems.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureu said the question should have been aimed at him. He would consider Mr. McGrath's idea.

The defeated amendments would have:

—Included national water quality standards in the bill rather than permitting water quality management agencies to set their own standards;

—Required new industry to build treatment systems to prevent pollution in areas under the jurisdiction of the proposed act rather than permitting payment of effluent fees to cover the cost of cleaning the polluted water bodies;

WANT EXPORT CONTROL

—Placed residual pollution abatement authority in the hands of the federal resources minister where provinces or other federal departments do not already have legal jurisdiction.

—Forced detergent manufacturers to label cleaning agents with the percentage of phosphates or other nutrients contained;

—Required the resources minister to consult provinces and industry before banning any nutrients for cleaning agents.

—Banned manufacture of cleaning agents containing phosphates in Canada by Jan. 1, 1971, and ended their sale by Jan. 1, 1972.

The water quality management agencies would, under the legislation, include federal, provincial and local representatives.

TO SET STANDARDS

The agencies would establish quality standards and set fees for industries and municipalities depositing waste in local waters. Industry would be open to $5,000-a-day fines if it exceeded waste deposit limits.

Mr. Chretien, speaking on an amendment to the Arctic waters bill, said findings of the voyage of the American tanker Manhattan through the Northwest Passage will be available free of charge to the Canadian government.

Private Canadian companies would have to negotiate with Humble Oil Co., owner of the ship, to see the results.

The amendment, moved by Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni), would have authorized the government to set continuing research programs on Arctic pollution.

Mr. Chretien said the amendment is unnecessary because the government has already stepped up research in the Arctic.

Suggestion: Gibraltar Be Dammed

MONTREAL (CP) — Jose Toran thinks the Mediterranean Sea should be dammed.

Mr. Toran, of Madrid, is president of the International Commission of Big Dam Builders. He told reporters Wednesday the construction of a dam across the Strait of Gibraltar would create a new source of hydroelectric power.

In addition, the resulting change in ocean currents would make the Sahara Desert bloom, he said.

By damming the strait, the flow of water from the Atlantic Ocean into the Mediterranean would cease and the sea would gradually evaporate, he said.

In 30 years, the level of the Mediterranean would have dropped enough for sluice gates in the dam to be opened, generating enough power to supply all of Europe.

The dam would also cut off a current flowing out of the Mediterranean into the Atlantic which forces a warmer current away from the African coast.

Derailment Cuts Highway Travel

TERRACE (CP) — A Canadian National Railways freight was derailed Wednesday night 48 miles west of this central British Columbia community, blocking all traffic on the Terrace-Prince Rupert highway and crippling CNR operations in the province.

The Terrace derailment came less than 12 hours after another CN freight derailed at Blue River, 100 miles northeast of Kamloops, plugging the main line and tearing up several hundred feet of track.

Meanwhile, passengers are being flown between Vancouver and Edmonton while the main line is blocked at Blue River, where 15 coal cars left the tracks. The line is expected to reopen late today.

SURREY (CP) — Municipal council said Wednesday it has received the go-ahead to put welfare recipients to work on a voluntary basis. Council was told earlier that recipients in the Trail and Nelson area were employed on municipal projects not normally undertaken by union personnel. They receive $50 a month and no loss of welfare payments.

P & O LINER ON WAY TO ALASKA

Arcadia Anchors Outside, Docking Too Risky

It was man the lifeboats and a cup of coffee at dockside this morning when the P & O liner Arcadia visited Victoria on the first of six Alaskan cruises scheduled for the season.

Due to dock in the early hours of the morning at Ogden Point, the towboat strike and 20-knot westerly winds changed her plans.

Her skipper, Capt. Edmund Cowan, decided not to take a chance on docking the huge 30,000-ton liner and instead dropped the hook at 5:45 a.m. in Esquimalt Harbor.

A few hours later her 600 passengers were being ferried ashore in some of the 24 covered lifeboats the Arcadia carries.

As they came ashore they were greeted with cups of coffee, served from a canopied stand, set up by members of the purser's crew.

Some of the passengers, most of them elderly, had trouble mounting the gangway, made steep by the ebb tide, but all were in good humor.

One woman quipped: "I don't mind — it gives me a chance to hold a good-looking man's hand!"

Another said the emergency landing was highly preferrable to their last call, made in Sitka, Alaska.

"We did the same thing there — but in miserable rain."

A man standing near her suggested the cruise organizers should make the Victoria stop four days instead of 12 hours.

"They could show us color slides of the other places."

Two Los Angeles women, Mrs. Anna Hoag and Mrs. Anna Nunn, said the best part of the cruise for them had been the service they had received from the crew.

"You can't beat the British!"

On this trip, Arcadia has more crew than passengers. She carries a complement of 625, about 400 of them hailing from India and Pakistan.

★ ★ ★

Manning the lifeboats, the Indian deck hands made a colorful sight in their native rig, almost making up for the bands, flowers and oratory cancelled out by the last-minute anchoring.

Civic dignitaries and other officials had an extra bonus of a boat ride to and from the reception and luncheon held in the ship today.

SHUTTLE SERVICE between the P & O liner Arcadia and the jetty in the Esquimalt Graving Dock is provided by some of the ship's lifeboats. About 100 passengers will board Arcadia in Victoria en route to California waters.

200 Dockmen Facing Layoff

By STEVE HUME

About 200 longshoremen will be idled next week when stockpiles of finished lumber at Ogden Point are exahusted.

A total of 140 regular and 60 casual longshoremen will be out of work.

Hector Campbell, general manager of Westcan Terminals Ltd. said Wednesday remaining supplies of finished lumber awaiting shipment overseas would last the rest of this week.

"We are just about out of stockpiled lumber, and after this week we'll be out of stock, he said.

George Dawson of King Bros. Ltd., shipping agents, said there isn't likely to be more than a trickle of finished lumber available when stockpiles go.

The towboat strike and subsequent slowdown of the forest industry are responsible for cutting off the supply of finished lumber for shipment overseas.

NOT SO SERIOUS

Fred Ritchie, wharf agent for Canadian National Railways wharf operations, says his end of things will not be affected quite so severely.

"Our personnel is minimal anyway so we won't feel it too seriously," he says. "We'd maintain our watchmen, and we still have a summer season of cruise vessels to fall back on."

"Most of the ships plan on coming in without assistance because tugboat crews are on strike.

"Coming in without assistance is tricky and an inconvenience but if the weather's right there's no danger. The last few freighters have come in and out without tug assistance — it was a bit touch and go with one but they can do it.

"We'll be kept busy preparing for them."

He says that if weather conditions are unfavorable cruise ships will go to anchor off Esquimalt.

The P & O liner Arcadia, in Victoria today, was unable to dock this morning because of weather and anchored off Esquimalt.

Burial Firms Oppose Park At Ross Bay

A Victoria funeral director is vehement about parks superintendant Herb Warren's suggestion that Ross Bay Cemetery be turned into a park.

"They can't do it," said William Hayward of Hayward's Funeral Chapel.

"People have paid for deep interment plots and the city will have to reimburse them if they take over the cemetery. That they can't afford to do."

SECOND BURIAL

"There are a lot of people that are still sentimental about death and they want to be buried with their family."

There will be a public outcry if the city pushes the issue, said Hayward.

Torry McCall of McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel agreed.

"I don't think people would take too kindly to such a move in the near future," said McCall.

WASTE OF PROPERTY

"I'm all for it," said Hendy. "Ross Bay Cemetery is just a waste of good property right now.

"If people were assured the plots would remain I don't think they would object."

Certain sections of the cemetery could be preserved intact, such as was done in Pioneer Park, as a reminder of the historical significance of the cemetery, he said.

'Beggars' Plan To Picket

The Victoria Committee on Unemployment, 50 members strong, will march on Victoria city hall next Wednesday, to ask for beggars' licences.

A meeting of the committee's executive Wednesday night decided the demonstration and picketing actions were necessary to dramatize the extent of the unemployment problem in Victoria.

Committee spokesman Frank Cox said today the group will have members at the welfare and Manpower offices with information sheets on unemployment conditions and what to do about them.

Cox said the committee will also send members to Vancouver to affiliate with two similar unemployed citizens groups there.

The demonstration at city hall is set for 2 p.m. And information pickets will be at Manpower and city welfare from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. five days a week.

Cox said the next meeting of the committee is Friday, June 5, at a time and place to be announced later.

The Victoria Committee on Unemployment is a group of unemployed citizens who have recently formed to seek ways of finding jobs.

In meetings last week they decided to petition the welfare and unemployment insurance assistance.

Pollution Blamed On Housewives

Greater Victoria housewives were named today as the main environment pollutants via detergent phosphates.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior metro health officer, made the charge in a letter to Victoria's health committee. The committee had asked Whitbread to check on the volume of phosphates being used in commercial plants and local cleaning institutions such as hospitals.

PREFER SOAP

"It is gratifying to report that the major institutions processing between 50,000 and 85,000 pounds of linen weekly — all use soap," reported Whitbread.

Not only do the professionals use straight soap, they prefer it.

Whitbread informed the committee that the experts still believe tallow soap or pure alkali the greatest cleaners of clothes.

The health officer also noted that the water throughout Greater Victoria requires no detergents to boost cleansing power. "It can be surmised," wrote Whitbread, continuing his laundry lesson, "that the main users of detergents are the housewives, and their attention should be directed to the fact that in Victoria detergents for laundering are absolutely unessential because of the good soft quality of the Victoria water supply."

Library Board Secrecy Irks Labor Delegates

The alleged firing of a permanent staff member and holding a library trustees meeting in secret were slammed by Victoria Labor Council Wednesday.

The council, unhappy over the Victoria Public Library reorganization under recommendations of the Woods, Gordon report, will protest to the board and to municipalities which appoint its members.

VLC delegates heard a report by Dora Payne, representing the library staff association, Local 410 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, who said that contrary to a promise made in February the board had fired a permanent staff member.

This was part of a plan to reduce staff from the existing 80 to 65 persons, she said, noting that before cutbacks the total staff had been 101, including temporary employees.

INTERNAL MATTERS

When the labor council complained that library service was being jeopardized, it was told that steps being taken were internal matters and no business of the council.

Delegate Tony Fraser, of the Boilermakers Union, suggested that service had in fact declined, that things were "a mess, and you can't find what you are looking for."

He added: "It seems the library board is deliberately trying to sabotage the library for some reason or other."

VLC secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan said he felt the job that was being done previously by chief librarian John Lort was good and that Lort was capable.

SAID CHAOTIC

"I've gone down there since the changes took place, and it's chaotic," Ryan said.

He noted that a trustee, Alan Newberry, had called for Lort's resignation because he disagreed with some of the Woods, Gordon proposals.

Noting that Newberry had called for the resignation of Lort, Ryan said that if anyone should resign over the new policies, it should be Newberry.

"It is shocking to realize that Mr. Newberry and others are jockeying for municipal prestige," Ryan said.

PAPER PATRONIZING

The council also had called for a responsible position to be taken by the press, which had until recently refrained from commenting on the public issue. Ryan had observed that Times editor Brian Tobin is a member of the board.

The Times May 28, Ryan said, had printed a long editorial headed The Ruffled Leaves, which he described as 'A very patronizing, condescending editorial about the library."

MOTHER, BABY HIT AS CAR JUMPS CURB

A 19-year-old mother and her three-week-old baby were hit by a car that jumped the curb following a two-car collision at Gladstone and Stanley about 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Mrs. Dobbyn was pushing the youngster in a baby carriage on the sidewalk when a car, driven by Herman Schmidt, 3320 Shelbourne, struck them before hitting a power pole, police said.

The Schmidt car had collided with another vehicle, driven by Merlin Naduriak, 24, of 1264 Gladstone, before jumping the curb out of control.

SAILOR SURVIVES ORDEAL AT SEA

A Victoria man found clinging to the mast of his foundering sailboat off San Juan Island by U.S. Coast Guard on Wednesday was released from Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning.

John Bowness, 22, of 1068 St. Louis, was flown by U.S. Coast Guard rescue helicopter to hospital and treated for shock and exposure after his nine-hour ordeal.

Bowness explained he was sailing off the San Juan Island in calm water when a heavy gust of wind hit him from behind. He was half way through the process to taking down his sails when the wind caught the boat and tipped it over.

He stood in water up to his knees as his 17-foot Davidson day sailer drifted between False Bay and Eagle Point.

Arthur Mayse . . .

MY WIFE AND I APproached marriage with the wariness of racoons investigating a box-trap. We were footloose and free, and the wedded state as we'd observed it seemed too often to be burdensome and even stifling.

Two of our young-married friends had already been divorced, and that bothered us. As individuals, each of them was a lively, likeable and interesting person. But as a couple, they failed miserably.

If they and others we knew couldn't go the course, there was no guarantee that we'd achieve a lasting union.

This fact in itself wasn't daunting enough to stop us. But, in a kidding sort of way, we cooked up an escape clause that could be invoked if marriage should prove to be a mistake. Each year, we would re-negotiate our contract, and if one or both of us wanted out, so be it.

Then, because we were happiest together and never quite complete when we weren't, we stood up before a minister.

As a matter of tradition, we still dust off our contract once a year. We did so while walking our dog this morning. Neither of us was of a mind to apply the escape clause.

We don't claim a perfect marriage . . . merely a durable and prevailingly happy one that has deepened with the years.

Come to think of it, I haven't the least idea how a "perfect" alliance might be defined.

Absolute agreement on all matters? Never a cross word spoken? Tastes that correspond right down the line, and completely matching temperaments?

Perhaps such alliances exist. If so, I suspect the partners are phlegmatic to the last degree, and their marriages fearfully dull.

Were ours made to that recipe, I wouldn't consider it much the best and most precious thing in my life, but only an exercise in boredom.

We get along very well. Our early fear that we would one day find we had nothing left to talk about has never materialized. What we didn't know then is that silence can also be a companionable state and a form of sharing.

We are also thoroughly aware of our differences in temperament, taste and minor attitudes.

I'm a putter-off till tomorrow . . . the sort of husband who takes forever or a little longer to tighten the loose doorknob and replace the worn tap washer. My wife is a do-it-now person.

She prefers factual reading to fiction which I enjoy, and makes up for my lack of money-sense by her ability to stretch our funds to an improbable extent when need be.

Yet these opposites have never got in our way; in fact, they complement each other and make for a better-rounded partnership.

I don't mean that we spend time pondering such matters, or that we unfailinging reflect sweetness and light. However, thinking about our years together now, I am aware of some facts about marriage that we didn't know when we set out on the adventure.

One of these is that love doesn't conquer all. Anyone who thinks it does might be wiser to stay single, or live in what was once defined as sin.

People in love can and sometimes do remain stubbornly juvenile-minded even when wed. They can be selfish, totally unrealistic, arbitrary and over-demanding.

The prolonged, wounded silence . . . the wrath that not only lets the sun go down but is served up warmed over next day . . . these can do cruel things to a marriage and to a family. They are based upon self-pity, which is first cousin to self-righteousness, and no less a saboteur.

I don't suggest that every marriage can succeed. Some are doomed from the start, or even earlier, and the divorce that ends them comes as an act of mercy.

In the other kind — those that work — a paradox exists. My wife and I thought we might be giving up our freedom. As matters turned out, we feel we have found a wider freedom in marriage than either of us could have attained outside it.

Waste Works Wonders For Growing Gardens

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Everybody talks about pollution of our environment. Now, almost everybody from politician to picket is trying to do something about it.

But long before pollution became a household word and the public became so acutely aware of pollutant dangers, there were the likes of Rachel Carson, the biologist whose writings warned that man was destroying nature with his insecticides. There were the likes of many others, famous and not so famous, who were warning man that he was choking himself to death with waste.

As early as the 1940s, Stan Bulpitt, of Darien, Conn., was aware and trying to figure ways to handle waste, but putting it to work again for man without hazard to him. "Recycling" is Bulpitt's word for it.

GARDEN BENEFITS

One of the methods he's using is as simple as what any green thumber in the family knows—the compost heap puts waste to work, as plant food.

But Bulpitt has gone far beyond the backyard. He's selling cities on the idea of giant composts to replace—or at least reduce the job of—the incinerator, which leaves ash (waste), and the ordinary garbage dump.

To date, the idea of the compost has been approved by Scarsdale, N.Y., a wealthy suburb of about 20,000. The city now composts the town's leaves each fall instead of polluting the surroundings by burning, dumping or burying them. The compost eventually is used for fertilization of public lands.

A city-wide compost can take almost any waste, Bulpitt says, with the exception of rags, plastics and metals. Which means that it can turn into fertilizer such wastes as paper, leaves and what-have-you.

FROM ENGLAND

I first met Bulpitt at the international flower show at New York's Coliseum. He's a secretary of the organization and has been an exhibitor each year for 42 years.

Bulpitt comes by his love of, and desire for preservation of, the green world via his father, a Briton who worked in the royal gardens. Bulpitt's father emigrated to the United States in 1911 and opened his own nursery and landscape business.

Son followed father into the nursery business, but Stan Bulpitt has broadened his interests to conservation and the fight against pollution, and spends much time travelling and talking on the subjects.

Now, the third generation is involved. Son Roger, 34, is associated with his father at their Brookside Nurseries in Darien, and daughter Sally, 25, is working for her doctorate in microbiology.

Bulpitt's exhibit at the flower show spelled out how the homeowner can start a compost heap—six or more feet square with a six-inch depth of fall leaves to start. As the lawn is mowed, add a two-inch level of clippings, repeat with six inches of leaves, and so on repeating as high as you wish. Chemistry (it takes a year or more) does the rest and if you've made a proper compost, there will not be any odor from decaying organic matter.

Use it, slicing it off vertically, for mulching vegetable or flower garden, incorporating it with soil.

Also included was Bulpitt's home-made garbage grinder, which slurries waste into "recycled" fertilizer. He sees a similar mechanism one day a part of a household the same way a dishwasher or washing machine is today.

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I wish you could clear something up for me that has me utterly confused. I made a coat and dress from some new knit fabric that was labelled Dacron polyester. It turned out so beautifully that I would like to make something else for summer from this same fabric but the polyesters I have seen don't have the name "Dacron" on the end of the bolt. Is there more than one type of polyester?—Mrs. R.E.K.

Dear Mrs. R.E.K.:

This has been confusing to many women. Perhaps the information I got from Man-Made Fibre Producers will clear this up for you.

Polyester is a generic name for a man-made fibre. Most polyesters can be machine-washed and put into the machine dryer if you are sure to remove it as soon as the tumbling cycle is completed. It very seldom needs any pressing, never with a hot iron. It is one of the most practical of all fibres because of its easy care, resistance to stretching and shrinking, wrinkle resistance, etc.

The name "Dacron" is a fibre trademark. You may also find names such as "Trevira, Avlin, Chemstrand, Encron, Fortrel," and many others which are all trade names for polyester. The properties of all these are practically the same, depending on the weight of the fabric, design and any other factors that would affect the price. These explain the vast price difference between types of polyesters.

Handicap Helped

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote to you a while back saying he had had polio as a child and was left with a limp. He complained that he couldn't dance or participate in sports — that life had dealt him a dirty deal. This hit pretty close to home, as I, too, had polio when I was a child. I lived in an iron lung for 7 months, and was left with more than a "limp," but that's where the similarity ends, as I am not complaining.

It's easy to sit back and say, "Life dealt me a dirty deal . . . I don't have a chance, I'm handicapped." That's just not true. I fought my way back with guts, therapy and faith in God. My advice to handicapped people is to do the best you can with what you have left. Don't feel sorry for yourself. The sooner you quit thinking of yourself as "handicapped" the sooner others will.

Of course there are many things I can't do, but there are still plenty of things I can do. I can see, and I can think, and I can make myself understood!

I honestly believe that I am a better person for having had to bear this extra burden. It has made me try a little harder, and it has helped me to understand the problems of others.

I am a grandfather now, and I thank God I didn't just sit back and say, "I can't do that — I'm handicapped, you know!"

What a lot of living I would have missed — Fought And Won.

DEAR WON: I'll tell the world you did! And you're a winner in my book.

DEAR ABBY: The men in our family are faced with a problem. My mother feels we should stand up when a lady enters the room. She says it's good manners. My brothers and I feel it is completely unnecessary and should be abolished.

Do you agree or disagree? If you disagree with us, could you please tell us why a man should stand up when a lady enters the room and why it was ever started? — Robert.

DEAR ROBERT: It was probably started as a way of offering a lady her preference of a place to sit. It's a small (but I think, important) courtesy and enables the lady to identify a gentleman.

DEAR ABBY: I want very much to remember someone (a very wonderful woman) in my will, but it presents a problem. People (her family as well as mine) will wonder why? Is there some way of remembering her privately so it will not be known? I do not want to embarrass her, but she deserves to be remembered. — Nameless, Please.

DEAR NAMELESS: Talk to your lawyer. It may be wise to "remember" her now.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, California 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Women

Editor: Maureen Duffus

Panel Compares Social Customs Of India, Canada

If equality of women is defined as the right to go out of the home to work, then the women of India are inferior, Dr. Subhas Gupta, Royal Roads professor, said in a panel discussion Tuesday.

Dr. Gupta's remarks came in the middle of a strong debate on the question of equality, touched off by his first statement that Indian women are "not inferior, not superior" to their men.

The meeting was sponsored by the Indian Cultural Society of India and Canada and was held at Provincial Museum. Topic of the discussion was the social customs of India and Canada.

Panelists were Dr. Gupta, Dr. P. M. H. Edwards, University of Victoria professor, and Miss Heather Oke, a graduate anthropologist.

He pointed out that the birth of a girl was, at one time, a cause for mourning.

"And if a man died, his wife was burned in the funeral pyre. This was not true of the men."

Singh said these examples of inferiority were a result of the feudal society in India in which the man was lord and master. It is the wife's duty to raise the family and look after the home while the husband issues orders and attends to financial affairs.

"If a woman deals efficiently with her home and children, how can you consider her inferior?" Dr. Gupta said. "Is it necessary for a woman to go out to work to be equal?"

A woman is considered intellectually equal to her male counterpart and is able to obtain equal education. Dr Gupta said.

During the panel discussion, Dr. Gupta said an adequate description of Indian social customs could not be given because "there are too many groups, classes and beliefs for enumeration."

There is a caste system among the Hindus "but even this has undergone such a revolution that no definition of caste can be given."

Miss Oke, in an attempt to define Canadian social customs, said Canada has no caste system but there is a class system based on economics.

"The difference between India and Canada is that one is born into a caste while one may change his social classs by changing his financial position."

Dr. Edwards summed up the discussion with the comment that the two countries are similar as "a result of the humanity of the people but different as a result of their histories."

Babies Fed Luxury Diets May Become Lazy Adults

BOSTON (AP) — A pediatrician at Massachusetts General Hospital says the United States may be producing a population of fat, lazy adults by feeding babies too well in their first year of life.

Dr. John D. Crawford says: "Lap-of-luxury diets may build obsolescence into infants the way manufacturers build it into automobiles."

Crawford's findings are based on animal research conducted over a number of years and were published in the Massachusetts General Hospital News.

He says rats fed luxury diets in the first 21 days of life gained size, sex maturity and activity levels at an earlier age than rats restricted in their primary diet.

Well-fed rats get fat and lazy and continue to eat at high levels even as their activity is reduced, and the result is they die younger, he said.

Crawford, head of the metabolic-endocrine unit in the hospital's children's service area, says he believes revision of baby diets should be given serious consideration.

NORFOLK GIRLS PLAN ART SHOW

A modern flower, an abstract sculpture and ceramic cups hold the attention of these Norfolk House students as they plan the display of their art work. Saturday, the girls will hold an art show, sale and tea from 2 to 4 p.m. in the school gymnasium, 801 Bank Street. A workshop will demonstrate how some of the paintings, ceramics, batiks, mobiles, woven crafts and embroidery are made. Fund raised from the sale will be used for art equipment in the new school. The girls are, from left, Helen Wilson, Marianne Koerner and Elizabeth Courtnall. The affair is sponsored by the Norfolk House Auxiliary.

ART DEALER WARNS

Beware of Overnight Success

MONTREAL (CP) — Mira Godard, president of the Canadian Art Dealers Association, says if the public "goes overboard immediately" for a new artist, chances are he isn't much good.

"It's presumptuous I know," she admitted, "but somehow it works.

"No artist is any good unless his ideas are ahead of mine, unless he sees more inwardly.

"And I, in my turn, have to stay that much ahead of the public."

Miss Godard said that when she opened her Godard Lefort gallery in 1961 "there was a very definite cleavage between abstract and representational art and the battle was hot and heavy."

"Today, tastes have changed so radically that the question never comes up. The most conservative people don't even scoff at abstract painting any more and we've experienced a pronounced shift toward the older generation digging it."

Artists have changed too, said Miss Godard. Their feet are firmly on the ground because they finally have people listening and paying attention to them.

"The climate of give and take has changed too, because it's become much more equalized. The public and the artist are both more certain of the latter's usefulness, importance, significance in society.

"Artists today don't consider themselves as living on the fringes of society."

The WI is celebrating its 60th anniversary. The theme for this year's concention will be Looking To The Future.

The Minister of Agriculture, C. M. Shelford, will address delegates at the first session Monday. Provincial president Mr. J. Mertler will open the convention.

Miss Margaret Brown, director of nursing services at the Queen Alexandra Solarium in Victoria will speak Tuesday followed by Mrs. Richard Albany of Victoria, BCWI representative on the Solarium board. A representative from the Children's Hospital in Vancouver will also speak Tuesday.

Sessions conclude Wednesday with the announcement of the new provincial board for 1970-72.

Child Care Tax Exemptions Asked for Volunteer Workers

WINNIPEG (CP) — A woman doing volunteer community work valuable to society should have income-tax exemptions for child care in the same manner as a woman working in an office, a delegate to the annual meeting of the National Council of Women of Canada said Tuesday.

Mrs. H. J. Loewen of Winnipeg told conference delegates that in doing volunteer work she has to pay for the cost of care for her children.

"I think that what I am doing in society and in my home is an important job and I feel I have every right to deduct the cost of child care from my income tax," she said. "One of the reasons why volunteers are disappearing in society is because of the costs of child care."

Mrs. Loewen was speaking on a resolution dealing with federal proposals for tax reform which sparked discussion about day care generally.

The council, composed of federated societies representing women across Canada, voted some support for federal tax-reform proposals.

By increasing basic income-tax exemptions, allowing child care exemptions and rejecting the concept of the family unit for income-tax purposes, the federal government's white paper on tax reform was "moving in the right direction in these areas."

RECEIPTS NEEDED

The white paper proposes to permit the deduction of child-care expenses where both parents work or where there is only one parent. Amounts would be deductible up to $500 for a child under age 14, or $2,000 a family and would have to be supported by receipts.

The council also passed a resolution expressing its deep concern about all aspects of pollution and pledged to work to eliminate it.

It plans to urge the federal government to ensure that "dangerous chemicals" are removed from detergents.

The council gave a sympathetic hearing to Mrs. Peter Bashuk of Winnipeg who expressed concern for persons in Communist-bloc countries who do not have the degree of freedom of speech, religion and the press that Canadians enjoy.

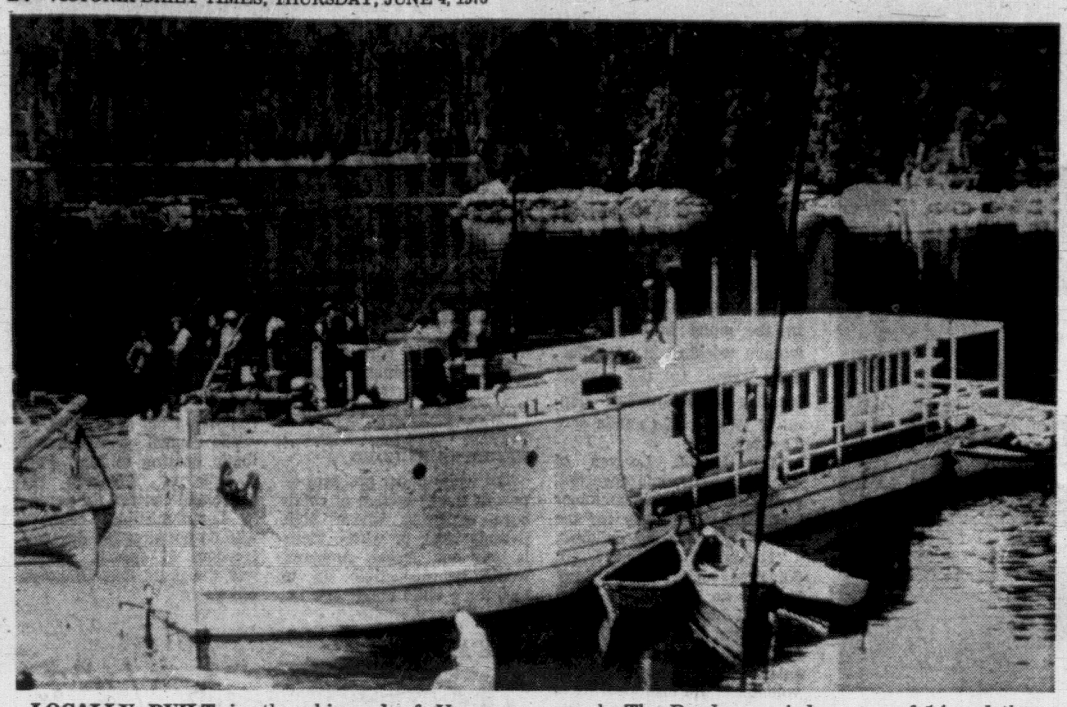
708 VIEW THRU TO 1211 DOUGLAS



LOCALLY BUILT in the shipyard of Yarrows Ltd. in 1930, the hydrographic survey houseboat Pender was one of three houseboats used for this work. The Pender carried a crew of 14 and three survey staff. She served the department until 1943.

Charts, Models, Pictures Trace Development of Coast

By PAT DUFOUR

Old salts — and quite a few young ones — should be smitten with a special display that went on show in The Bay's Douglas Room today and continues until June 20.

Put on by the Canadian hydrographic service, it includes pictures, charts and models that trace the development of British Columbia's marine history from the days of Capt. Cook.

Even Capt. Bligh, who most remember as the uncompromising master of the Bounty, took a hand in the development of our shipping facilities.

He was Capt. Cook's sailing master in HMS Resolution and, according to records, a good one. It is for him that Bligh Island is named in Nootka Sound.

Bligh was aboard when HMS Resolution did survey work on our northwest coast in 1778.

This voyage was to be the forerunner of many carried out by ships of the Royal Navy.

Capt. George Vancouver was 34 when he set sail from England to plot our coastline and carve his name in history.

★ ★ ★

Two years later Vancouver used the Russians' chart of the coastline from Cape Trinity to Point Banks for his own frand chart that made him famous.

One of the things that is impressive about this week's display is the amazing accuracy of the ancient charts.

In those days soundings were made the hard way — by men in long-boats who rowed into position and, with lead lines, probed the depths and nature of the sea's bottom.

Names of islands, headlands and other points of our coastline become more personal when you see this display.

Take, for instance, Hecate Strait, named for the ship in which Admiral Sir George Richards spent years surveying the B.C. coast.

His was the last Royal Navy vessel to be used for purely hydographic work in this area.

Before he left for England he made sure that the work would carry on. He persuaded the Admiralty to spend $3,500 to charter the Hudson's Bay's Beaver and talked Governor James Douglas to guarantee the extra $500 needed from the colonial treasury.

When she switched to the white ensign in 1862, the Beaver had one of Richard's officers, Daniel Pender, as her master. In addition to her officers, she carried 29 seamen and one marine.

To round out the show, the Maritime Museum has loaned some models of survey ships, including the Beaver.

Hydrographic personnel will be on hand at all times and films will be shown that will unravel the mysteries of tides and currents, tidal waves caused by earthquakes, and the buildup of the gigantic ocean wave patterns.

Sentence Increased

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — An Israeli Arab senteneed to 12 years imprisonment on charges of spying for Egypt had his sentence increased to 16 years after the prosecutor appealed. Abdel Rahim Karman was convicted several months ago of being a trained agent of the Egyptian intelligence service.

Patients Transferred

The second helicopter transfer of patients from the Woodlands School in New Westminster to the Eric Martin Institute took place Wednesday.

The 21 patients are chronic paediatric cases with mental retardation, who qualify for extended care coverage in the Eric Martin Institute.

In Wednesday's transfer the patients were moved by a helicopter from the 442 Squadron, Comox, in two 30-minute flights leaving at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Brazil Drought Tests Peasants' Will to Survive

By FRANCISCO SILVA

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — It's often said in Brazil that "only stubbornness keeps people alive in the northeast." This year one of the worst droughts in a century is testing the saying.

A few peasants congregate around wooden crosses and wait for death but the great majority doggedly go on trying to survive.

When the rains did not fall in March plantation owners started laying off the peasants. They remain on the land for a while, eating whatever food is stored. Then they pick up their meager belongings, gather their many children and head for the cities, on foot, on journeys that may take weeks.

On the way, their numbers grow and they co-operatively dig up wild roots, pick cactus fruits, compete with the snakes and lizards for eggs in birds nests and finally reach small villages, where some loot food stores when no work is found.

Some of the luckier ones find a truck driver who, defying police orders, brings them to the greener farmlands of the south, where they are sold to farmers as bonded workers.

Others go to emergency employment posts set up by the government throughout the region, where they are paid less than 50 cents for a long day's work. Still others reach the cities, where they are either sent back to the areas they left in the interior, or mingle with the street beggars.

Jose Acacio da Silva, 40, a sharecropper in Penedo, state of Alagoas, is one of the estimated 200,000 peasants laid off by landowners in the northeast. Although he owned no land, he had managed to buy 40 cows. He watched them die of thirst and starvation. He decided to stay on the land, and wait for the rains, but says:

"If it doesn't rain in 30 days, I'll start looting myself."

For the last four months most of the peasants have survived on a diet of manioc root flour mixed with a little water and salt. The government has promised 10,000 tons of food a month to the area.

Supplies of beans, dried beef, coffee and sugar were transported in the stricken region Wednesday by heavily-guarded army trucks. The armed guards were needed to keep hungry mobs away from the food.

Relief trains carrying food have been held up previously by peasant mobs.

L-Dopa Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government today approved the general use of L-dopa, a new drug widely hailed as the first effective help for the hundreds of thousands of persons suffering from Parkinson's Disease.

The Food and Drug Administration, under heavy public pressure, cleared the drug for sale in an unusually short time. The drug application was filed 90 days ago.

But the FDA also ordered unprecedented follow-up testing by manufacturers because of the high incidence of adverse side effects associated with L-dopa.

Parkinson's Disease is a disorder of the central nervous system, usually affecting persons over 50 and causing leg and arm tremors that often progress to total rigidity. There has been no effective drug treatment for the incapacitating disease.

Dr. Charles C. Edwards, FDA commissioner, said clinical tests in the U.S. since 1966 indicate approximately two of three patients are partially or totally relieved of their symptoms by L-dopa.

He cautioned, however, that "side effects have been reported in a majority of patients, some of them quite unpleasant and others even dangerous." The side effects range from nausea to intestinal bleeding, heart problems and mental disturbances of varying severity.

L-dopa is a naturally occurring substance known as an amino acid. It is converted to a product called dopamine in the body.

Nutritional Biochemicals Co. said in Cleveland Wednesday it is reducing the average wholesale cost of a day's tablet dosage of L-dopa to 80 cents from $1.50.

Nutritional Biochemicals, the largest source of L-dopa in the U.S., said its price for L-dopa was reduced to $160 from $300 a kilo, or 2.2 pounds, for tablets and a $170 a kilo for capsules. Five years ago, the drug cost $5,000 a kilo.

Riots Kill Two

BUENAVENTURA (AP) — Student riots erupted around the customs house in this Colombian port city and local authorities imposed a curfew. Two high school students were reported killed in clashes between rioters and police. Army troops moved in during the evening to reinforce local police and military garrisons in Buenaventura, the main Colombian port on the Pacific.

N. Koreans Wound Two Civilians

SEOUL (AP) — North Korean machine-gunners fired across the Imjin River into South Korea Wednesday night, wounding two South Korean civilians asleep in their home, the United Nations command reported today.

The shooting occurred after four North Korean intruders were sighted on the southern bank of the river, which separates North and South Korea on the western front, the command said. When UN Command troops fired flares and small arms, the intruders jumped into the water and apparently returned to the North, it added.

At this time, it said North Korean positions fired an undetermined number of 12.5-millimetre rounds into South Korea.

Lynch Faces 'Get Out' Outcry

DUBLIN (AP) — Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic, facing the biggest crisis of his political career, scheduled another meeting tonight with other leaders of his Fianna Fail party in an effort to hold it together and remain its chief.

The party, which has governed Ireland for 32 of the last 38 years, has been rent by the firing and arrest of two former cabinet ministers charged by Lynch with plotting to smuggle arms to rebellious Roman Catholics in British-ruled Northern Ireland.

The party hierarchy deadlocked Wednesday over Lynch's demand for expulsion from the party of Kevin Boland, who quit the cabinet in protest of the firing of the other two ministers and has launched a "get-Lynch-out" campaign.

WANTED ELECTION

Lynch's efforts could spark a major revolt by hard-line party members who condone violence as a means of reuniting Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland with the Roman Catholic republic. Lynch favors peaceful means.

More than 20 of Fianna Fail's 74 deputies in Parliament are demanding an immediate national election on the issue.

In Belfast, the capital of Northern Ireland, a gunman fired into a crowd of scuffling Protestants and Roman Catholics Wednesday night, injuring two men slightly. A British officer wrested the man's pistol from him, but he escaped.

British troops later dispersed a crowd of 300, while 600 police and soldiers cordoned off Protestant sections of the city.

Early today an explosion erupted next to the wall of the West Belfast Pigeon Society in a Protestant quarter. The blast shattered windows in the area.

"Nobody was hurt, but I imagine the pigeons will be laying rather erratically for a week or two," an army spokesman said.

MINOR FREEDOMS GRANTED

Cigarette Lighters Flare Again on Lisbon Streets

LISBON — The Portuguese are openly showing their cigarette lighters now, without fear of prosecution or denunciation. This and other smaller movements reflect a slight liberalization of the Portuguese regime, but Premier Marcello Caetano has not taken action to restore fundamental freedoms.

The government has limited itself largely to secondary problems — such as cigarette lighters — because its supporters are divided on major issues. The cabinet recently revoked a 1937 decree that required all users to obtain yearly licenses for cigarette lighters. The decree was said to have been issued to protect the match monopoly.

There have been other, more basic signs of a limited relaxation of Premier Caetano's regime this spring. For the first time in decades, there were lively debates in the National Assembly. Students who defied the anti-strike ban have been granted amnesty. Workers are pressing their government run syndicates for higher wages and getting them and the government has openly begun to campaign for some kind of an agreement with the European Common Market.

In the field of civil liberties, however, there has been no visible progress. After one month of limited freedom during last fall's electoral campaign, opposition groups were dissolved and censorship restored — just as in the days of the former dictator, Antonio de Oliveira Salazar. The promised press law has been put off again, and arbitrary arrests and detentions still continue.

Father Jose da Felicidade Alves, the controversial priest who questioned Portugal's colonial policy and urged reforms in the Catholic church, was arrested recently, according to authoritative sources.

Lisbon's Cardinal Patriarch, Dom Manual Goncalves Cerejeira discharged Felicidade from his priestly functions in 1968, but the 44-year-old progressive Catholic has continued to play an active role particularly among church young people.

Progressive Catholic spokesmen said that Felicidade was arrested in his home by a brigade of the political police. The padre has been interrogated on several occasions by the political police and his home searched.

Police agents were reported to have said that Felicidade has been detained in connection with a publication called Gedoc, a progressive Catholic magazine, which has openly attacked Portugal's colonial policy.

On the question of Portugal's African territories the Caetano Government has proved just as uncompromising as the Salazar Government, which it succeeded in September, 1968, after Salazar was incapacitated by a stroke. The police have cracked down sharply on liberal circles, particularly at Lisbon University, alleging an anticolonial plot. Court action is under way against four Socialist leaders, who were candidates in last fall's National Assembly elections, for "activities against the defence of the overseas territories."

"Caetano wants to be an arbiter, but the country needs leadership now and so he will have to take important options soon," says a Socialist author.

Divergences within the regime have been most apparent in the National Assembly, which under Salazar had been a harmonious, rubber-stamp body. There is still no real parliamentary opposition, but the regime's forces can be broken down into about 30 liberal deputies, 30 so-called ultra right-wingers and 70 middlemen, who will go along with what they think is the government's view.

Fiji, Bhutan Ready For U.N. Membership

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — The Pacific island nation of Fiji, which will receive its independence from Britain Oct. 10, is likely to become the 127th member of the United Nations — unless Bhutan applies first.

Speaking with correspondents after a meeting with the General Assembly Colonialism Committee, Fiji Chief Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara said his government definitely will apply for admission to the UN. Arrangements for Fijian independence were completed at a constitutional conference in London in April.

The king of the Himalayan protectorate of Bhutan also has indicated that his country will apply for UN membership, but no details are available here. India handles Bhutan's defence and external relations, and presumably any application would be made through New Delhi.

Conceivably the Persian Gulf Sheikdom of Bahrain also will apply for membership during the UN's 25th anniversary celebration this year. On May 11 the Security Council pronounced its blessing on Bahrain's sovereignty and independence following a report by a special UN representative based on consultations there.

But Bahrain is thought to be more concerned immediately with its position in the fledgling Union of Arab Emirates. This grouping is expected to assert more authority following withdrawal of the British military presence from the Persian Gulf, and possibly to negotiate a new defense arrangement with Iran.

Another southwest Pacific entity attaining independence from Britain this year, Tonga, has indicated it will not seek UN membership. Tonga, a kingdom, has a population of only about 75,000 but is spread over two main islands and about 300 others in a grouping some 1,100 miles north of New Zealand. Its population of about half a million includes 256,000 Indians and some 215,000 Fijians, who are of Polynesian origin.

In the meeting with correspondents, Mara characterized Fiji as a multiracial country about to embark on its sixth development program. Sugar, grown by 14,000 independent farmers, and tourism are its principal industries.

"We feel in Fiji we are part of the world, and if we cannot live with the rest of the world in Fiji, we cannot live with the rest of the world outside Fiji," Mara said of efforts at multiracial harmony. Opposition leader S. M. Koya agreed.

Although Tonga would classify as a mini-state for which the United States has proposed the alternative of an associate membership in the UN, both Bhutan (population 800,000; area 16,000 square miles) and Bahrain (population 200,000; area 231 square miles) would qualify for full membership. Bahrain already is a member of several UN specialized agencies.

SEA LION HOOKED TO KIDNEY MACHINE

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — A huge sea lion was hooked up to a human kidney machine in an attempt to counteract an adverse reaction the animal suffered from a dose of barbiturates.

The machine, which cleanses the blood, was connected to Apollo, a performer at the Sea World Aquatic Park, for 12 hours before it was needed for a human patient.

It was believed to be the first time a kidney machine had been used on such an animal. However, even with the treatment, Apollo was reported in critical condition and in a coma.

ACCENT IS ON HOME TRAVEL

Canada's Travel Industry to Continue Growth

By MICHAEL BATE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's booming travel industry, which earned about $3,500,000,000 in 1969, is expected to continue its startling growth this year but the accent in 1970-71 will be on home travel.

Last year foreign visitors accounted for $1,075,000,000 of the industry's earnings and pushed Canada up among the top five earners of foreign tourist income in the world.

Jean-Luc Pepin, minister of industry, trade and commerce, has said the federal government's office of tourism will play a more active and direct role in promoting domestic travel, as a matter of "national interest."

Although the government will attempt to encourage Canadians to travel in Canada the program should not "be construed as inhibiting Canadians from travelling abroad," Mr. Pepin said.

Canadians spent an estimated $1,280,000,000 outside the country last year—$201,000,000 more than tourists brought into Canada.

WANT TO ESCAPE

The highest percentage of a total of 3,079 non-Canadian tourists interviewed at the border said they planned to do some outdoor camping and tenting, visit a vacation spot or do some sightseeing away from big cities.

Americans are Canada's best customers. In 1969, for example, 35,766,000 of them spent an average of $27.06 each in Canada, or a total of $969,000,000.

Government officials consider "plant improvements" such as expanded airline service and increased investment in advertising and promotion as the main reasons for the whopping growth of the travel industry.

Canada now has about 20,000 tourist accommodations with room for more than 500,000 persons at one time. Between 1963 and 1966, in preparation for Centennial Year and Expo 67, Canadians invested $800,000,000 in hotels and motels.

The outlook by regions:

ATLANTIC

In Prince Edward Island, which boasts alluring beaches, fishing, harness racing and the historic capital of Charlottetown, travel bureau officials say that "if the weather is willing" 1970 will bring another bumper crop of tourists.

During the May-October tourist season last year, visitors spent $17,048,840 in P.E.I. About 354,600, or 71 per cent of the total number of tourists who visited the island, were from other provinces.

New tourist "complexes" under construction on the island include accommodation, golf courses, park and other recreation facilities—five such facilities are planned at focal points around the province.

About $160,000 is being spent on print advertising and Prince Edward Island co-operates with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in a joint advertising campaign for the Maritime provinces.

LANDSCAPE UNSPOILED

In Nova Scotia, travel bureau officials say they feel most people come for the "unspoiled landscape, clean air and uncrowded highways."

Three new ventures are expected to draw extra tourists to Nova Scotia this year. One is the Prince of Fundy, a new ferry between Yarmouth and Portland, Me. Air Canada is flying direct to Halifax from Boston and New York for the first time and an international theatre arts festival is scheduled for Wolfville, N.S., July 17-19.

"General vacation and cruises" account for much of the tourist industry in Newfoundland. The province's 32 parks attracted 1,182,050 visitors to camping and trailer space units.

The department also estimates the travel industry in 1969 brought the province $62,151,238—the major portion coming from Canadians from other provinces.

QUEBEC

In Quebec, the 1970 tourist season looks successful judging by the number of requests for information received by the department of tourism.

The northeastern U.S., target of most of Quebec's publicity, is the source of most of the requests, up compared to the same time last year.

The main themes of the publicity for vacations in Quebec are camping, sightseeing tours of the province, Quebec history, the romantic French background and "swinging Quebec."

ONTARIO

Like the rest of the provinces, the Ontario department of tourism and information said 1969 was an excellent year. Tourist spending was $1,600,000,000, an increase of five per cent over 1968.

This figure includes $900,000,000 spent by 22,000,000 visitors from the United States. An additional 4,000,000 tourists from Quebec and 4,000,000 from other provinces also spent time in Ontario. A department spokesman said he expects a total of 30,000,000 visitors in Ontario during 1970.

Ontario had one of the best winter sports season on record in 1969-70 and the department is optimistic about tourist prospects in coming years.

PRAIRIES

In Saskatchewan and Manitoba camping is the most popular type of family-style vacation. An estimated 1,309,000 tourists visited Saskatchewan in 1969 and Canadians accounted for 1,082,400 of that figure.

The provincial industry department's tourist branch estimates income from tourists in 1969 was $82,500,000, up about 10 per cent from 1968.

Some resort operators in Alberta say they do not expect an exceptionally good summer because of the state of the economy.

Chateau Lake Louise says advance bookings are up over 1968 but down from 1969. Banff Springs hotel says bookings are about the same as last year.

Jasper Park Lodge says reservations based on tours—mainly American tourists—are on par with last year but regular bookings are up 10 per cent over 1969, partly because of the opening of the Yellowhead Highway. The highway connects Jasper with Kamloops, B.C., on the southern leg and with Prince George, B.C., on the northern leg.

The Alberta government travel bureau says tourists spent $222,000,000 in the province in 1969: $27,000,000 by tourists from outside Canada, $149,000,000 by Albertans and $46,000,000 by other Canadians.

The travel bureau says camping is increasing most rapidly in Jasper National Park which has never been as popular as the more accessible—until the Yellowhead Highway—Banff National Park to the south.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

In British Columbia, R. L. Colby, executive director of travel at Victoria, says the Cariboo, Peace River and northern B.C. areas are attracting an increasing number of tourists.

Factors influencing travel include a "combination of good accommodation and outdoor living, and the friendliness of B.C. residents also helps."

In 1969 tourists from other provinces to B.C. totalled 2,756,675 by automobile, and they spent an estimated $110,267,000. Tourists from the U.S. numbered 4,617,767 and spent about $184,719,700.

There is also considerable growth in lodges and cabins in remote areas of the province, most of them aimed at attracting U.S. hunters and fishermen.

'Too Old for Stage' —Raymond Massey

LONDON (AP) — Raymond Massey is making his first London stage appearance in 32 years, and he says it will be his last.

"I don't have the stamina any more for the theatre," the 73-year-old Canadian-born actor says.

Massey confessed he felt stark terror when he opened at the Duke of York Theatre last week in I Never Sang For My Father.

The Robert Anderson play received generally enthusiastic notices, but most of the praise was for Massey, a favorite with the British.

He is not pleased with the way things have been developing in the theatre since he played his last stage role in the United States 12 years ago.

"To me theatre should be enchantment, make believe, let's pretend. Today it's sex, obscenity and squalor.

"We don't seem to have entertainment any more. The stage has become a dissecting table and I'm sure people don't want to be insulted by the vulgarity of the permissive theatre of cinema.

LONGHAIRS UNINSURED

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP)—Men whose hair, beards or sideburns are long and scraggly cannot collect unemployment insurance in Monterey.

Hammond said he made his decision after a survey of 900 employers, and next day denied payments to five long-haired applicants.

"Because the overwhelming majority of employers will not accept long hair on male employees, we feel that those who persist in wearing it are voluntarily restricting their availability," Hammond said.

'SENSITIVE, HARSHLY PENETRATING'

Film Shows Lives of Mentally Retarded

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The film Danny and Nicky, a sensitive but at times harshly penetrating view of the lives of two mentally retarded boys, made its American debut Wednesday night at a special Canadian embassy presentation.

Although already acclaimed by a dozen or more selected audiences of people working with the retarded, the 55-minute National Film Board of Canada production will make its first major public appearance in a CBC television presentation in September.

The hope is that it might later be sold for U.S. TV presentation.

Director-producer Doug Jackson, 31, also says he is considering editing the film to a 20- to 30-minute version suitable for movie theatre presentation.

He ended up with 44,000 feet of film—"about 20 hours running time."

"In six months," he said in an interview, "working night and day, I cut it to its present 2,000 feet."

But the candid studies of the two lives makes the point in favor of Danny, 9, in the warm, affectionate middle-class home of his parents in Pointe Claire, Que.

With an intelligence quotient of 47, Danny attends a modern school for the retarded, swims, plays sports, has the prospect of eventually learning a trade and at least partially supporting himself.

Nicky, 14, with an IQ of 54, is probably trapped forever in an unnamed, 100-year-old Ontario institution where only 500 of the 2,000 all-ages patients receive formal training.

Fuchsias Require Much Attention

By HILDA BEASTALL

Fuchsias in pots, tubs and hanging baskets will be making rapid growth, with higher temperatures often posing a problem in watering.

Few plants make so much growth so quickly, and then reach flowering stage almost before we realize it.

Hilda

One or two varieties and certain fuchsia species, are later in blooming; some are more upright in habit and so do not respond to constant pinching back.

To have a really well branched fuchsia in a tub or basket, covered with bloom all summer we must continually be nipping out the tips of every branchlet throughout May and early June.

This is the treatment which induces masses of flower buds to form, and to keep the plants healthy they need ample watering and feeding. The limited area of soil in containers is soon exhausted.

Pour onto the soil of the fuchsia pot slowly, giving each plant a pint of the liquid.

Later in the day you'll need to giv another pint of water to each plant. If they are hanging or standing in dappled light and shade of trees or a lath shelter, they will benefit from a fine spray of water over the complete plant.

On hot days or when humidity is low, do this spraying no later than 2 p.m. so that the foliage will not still have spots of moisture when the temperature drops at sundown.

Most fuchsia varieties will develop flower buds freely in June, and pinching of the tips can be discontinued around mid month.

However, if the plants had a slow start, continue pinching until your plants are well filled in and the shape you want.

The amount of growth and quantity of blossom on fuchsias is so great that twice daily watering and every other day of feeding will be required right through summer.

This ensures continuance of bloom into fall. In fact, September and October can be peak months of attractiveness for home gardeners with their fuchsias.

By September, less watering and no fertilizer at all will commence the hardening process to keep the plants safe through another winter, preferably outdoors.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

During every tournament conducted by the American Contract Bridge League, each participating pair is required to put on display a "convention card." On this card are listed the system the pair is playing, the various artificial bids employed, etc. This is done so that the opponents will not be at an unfair disadvantage.

At a recent tournament, in the afternoon session of a two-session event, a pair had written on its convention card: "We play the Roth-Stone System up to page 140." When the evening session rolled around, the sentence had been changed to read: "We play the Roth-Stone System up to page 151."

The conclusion is, of course, obvious: neither of them ate a good dinner, if any dinner at all.

An illustration of why the opponents must be notified of conventional bids, can be observed in today's deal.

Neither side vulnerable, South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

When play had ended, South had gone down three tricks at his doubled one no-trump contract. All he made were the three aces he possessed, plus dummy's king of spades. The setback cost North-South 500 points.

Undoubtedly, most readers have raised quizzical eyebrows at South's one no-trump bid. According to accepted standards, an opening one no-trump bid is made with a hand that contains 16-18 high-card points.

However, on North-South's convention card, it was stated that their opening one no-trump bid showed 12-14 points (referred to in tournament play as "the weak no-trump"). Thus, when the bidding came around to East, he knew that South's hand was "weak."

Actually, if East had thought that South's no-trump opening was standard (16-18 points), he might not have doubled, for one very rarely competes against a balanced hand that contains 16-18 high-card points. Had East passed, South presumably would have gone down the same three tricks, for a loss of only 150 points.

When East made his double, West passed with delight, for he knew that South was caught in the middle. And so it turned out, with South undoubtedly wondering about the practicality of weak no-trump opening bids.

Boy Scouts Rescued In Bushland

BLIND RIVER, Ont. (CP) — A dozen boy scouts from Ohio were among persons rescued Wednesday from a bushland area north of here where they were stranded when roads were washed out by heavy rains this week.

Of an estimated 100 persons stranded along the Mississagi and Little White rivers, about 25 were brought out of the area by helicopter and planes before darkness Wednesday night.

The rescue operations were to resume early today, as the weatherman called for more of Wednesday's sunshine and no rain.

The scouts were on camping trip in the bushland region, where more than 10 inches of rain fell between Saturday and early Wednesday morning, causing river floods which washed out all accessible roads north of here.

The boys were reported undisturbed by their situation and happy with the ideal fishing conditions. They and the others rescued were brought here where the Emergency Measures Organization provided temporary accommodation and food.

The flooding, which covered an area from north of this town, about 70 miles southeast of Sault Ste. Marie, to as far east as Dowling, 20 miles west of Sudbury, has caused damage expected to total hundreds of thousands of dollars.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Military Training Confined to One Day

By BOB BOWMAN

In the early days of Upper Canada, and for many years, every male citizen between 18 and 60 years of age had to undergo military training. They were all members of the Sedentary Militia. Perhaps the word "sedentary," meaning "sitting", was well-chosen because the military training was far from arduous. It was confined to one day, June 4, which was known as "training day."

The officers were usually chosen from the "upper crust" citizens, and were just as amateurish and awkward as the rank and file. They went through their prescribed drill and manoeuvres, and then adjourned for sports, picnics, and heavy drinking. Their training was over, for another year.

Yet there were occasions when the Sedentary Militia was called out in earnest. One of them was during the 1837 rebellion led by W. L. Mackenzie. Although practically all the action took place in Toronto, and ended quickly, the milita was on duty, day and night, for 10 days. Kingston organized a force of 500 men, including young lawyer John A. Macdonald who carried a heavy musket.

The worst enemy was rumor because it often took several days for news to be made known through relatively nearby areas. It was carried by ships, stage coaches, or special couriers on horseback.

The crisis in Upper Canada was over in a few days but was prolonged for a year because of American sympathizers. They had the idea that Canadians wanted to be "liberated" from Britain, and one organization called the "Hunters" caused a great deal of trouble along the border. One group raided Prescott, Ontario, where there was a battle that lasted for several days. The Canadian defenders lost 67 men, killed or wounded, while the Hunters lost 37. The invaders were taken to Kingston and eight of the leaders were hanged.

COAST GUARD CUTTER MAKES FIRST RESCUE

The former department of fisheries vessel Hunter Point, the cutter took in tow an American power cruiser Pandora, of Seattle, which was drifting five miles east of Discovery Island.

This was her first major rescue since Rider began her duties as a coast guard vessel two weeks ago.

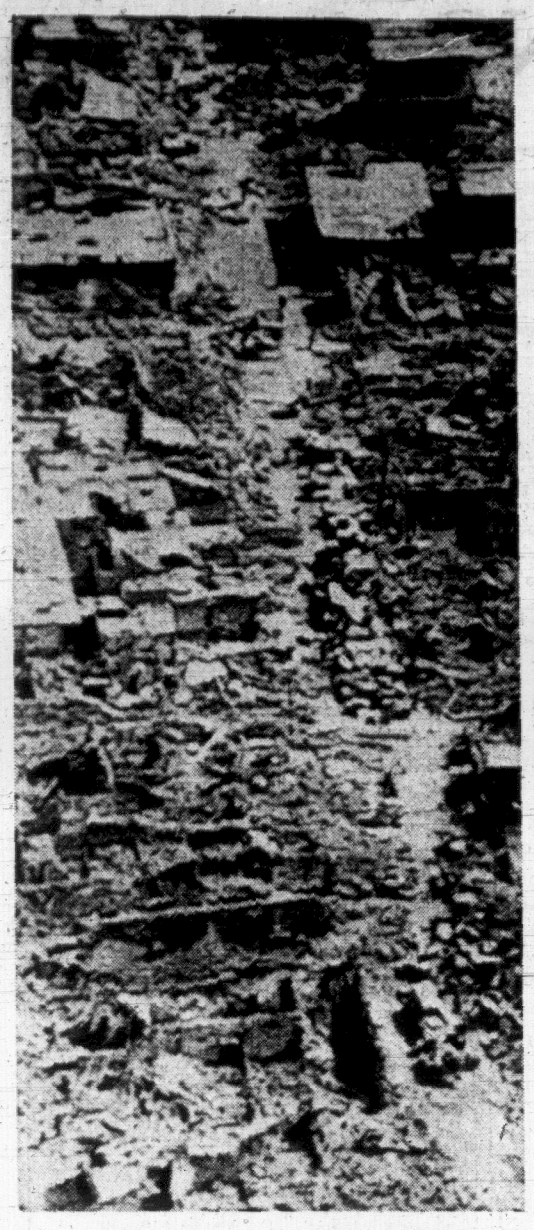
600,000 Homeless in Peru



THIS ONCE WAS TOWN OF CASMA
. . . death toll here still unknown

By MICHAEL LOCKELY

LIMA (Reuters) — Lima was shaken by a strong earth tremor Wednesday night for the second time this week following a devastating earthquake Sunday which killed an estimated 40,000 persons in northern Peru.

The latest tremor came as the government tried desperately to fly food and medicine to about 600,000 persons made homeless by the earthquake Sunday.

Troops managed Wednesday to clear a 1,000-foot landing strip in the central Huaylas Corridor in the rugged Andes, and rescue planes and helicopters started bringing in supplies in a race against time to reach the injured and homeless.

Roads in the stricken region were left impassable by landslides and mounds of rubble. Government officials said Wednesday night it might take days to clear them for convoys of trucks.

ESTIMATES IMPOSSIBLE

The disaster "is of unimaginable proportions, and it is beyond human power to estimate the real number of victims," presidential spokesman Augusto Zimmerman told reporters.

"The first thing we have to do is to save the lives of those who survived," he said. "Nothing can be done for the dead."

As he spoke, paratroops were dropped with supplies near Yungay in the hard-hit Central Valley to rescue 2,500 homeless and injured, the only survivors of the town's 20,000 inhabitants. Yungay was first shattered by the quake and then floodwaters from a lake wiped it off the map.

The homeless, mainly Indians, are living without shelter, food or clothes in sub-zero temperatures on the mountain slopes at heights of up to 12,000 feet.

The United States sent two giant Hercules transport planes loaded with food and medical supplies and three helicopters after a Peruvian appeal for help. More planes were to arrive today from the U.S. Air Force base in Panama.

SUPPLIES ARRIVE

When troops cleared the landing strip in the corridor near the ruins of Huaras, rescue planes and helicopters were able to bring in more than 100 tons of supplies.

Huaras, a picturesque mountain town, was almost entirely levelled when the earthquake struck. So far, 650 bodies have been dug out of the rubble.

But it will take days for the makeshift runway to be lengthened enough to handle twin-engined planes.

Communications with much of the area were practically nonexistent, but unconfirmed reports of more villages destroyed trickle into Lima.

Two policemen radioed that buildings in the villages of Aija and Sucho, with a combined population of 11,000, collapsed and buried their inhabitants.

A Reuters correspondent who visited the northern port of Chimbote reported that hundreds of thousands of homeless people—their clothes torn, and covered with dirt—were living in tiny shacks made of cardboard and pieces of plastic.

AID OFFERED

LIMA (Reuters) — More than a dozen countries and international organizations have offered or sent aid to Peru, where about 40,000 persons are estimated to have died in an earthquake Sunday.

Augusto Zimmerman, government information officer, said the countries include Canada, Argentina, the United States, West Germany, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, France, Britain, Israel, Venezuela and India, and that offers of aid are continuing to arrive.

Brazil has sent two Hercules transport planes and two helicopters and Chile has sent three ships with food and a portable hospital with 150 beds and support personnel.

Canada has pledged $25,000 and the U.S. $75,000 and the use of three C-130 transports, two helicopters and quantities of supplies from relief warehouses in Panama.

The United Nations, the Organization of American States and the U.S. Agency for International Development have donated $45,000 and sent medical personnel and equipment.

In Geneva, the League of Red Cross societies announced that several national Red Cross societies are sending medicine, clothing, blankets and cash. The Canadian Red Cross plans to send $16,500 in aid.

The Price We Will Pay For Gambling

If legalized gambling comes to Canada, so will organized crime, corruption, influence peddling and other vices. Both individuals and communities will pay a high price for casinos. WEBB — In loving memory of our dear Mother, Ada G. Webb, passed away June 4, 1957; also our dear Dad William A. Webb, passed away Nov. 4, 1952.
There is a tie death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance live forever.—Their grateful family.
—Their grateful family.

WILLIAMS — In loving memory of a wonderful son, Lee Gerald Williams who passed away June 1966, aged 19 years.
Tied with a golden thread of love,
Sprayed with a million tears.
A bouquet of cherished memories,
We keep through all the years . . .
Our flowers faded too soon.
—Sadly longed for and missed.
Mom and Dad.

WILSON — In loving memory of my dear daughter, Mary C. Wilson.
It's now 4 years since God took you away.
I miss you until the day breaks and the shadows flee away.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

TOM JONES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8. Guests include actress-singer Claudine Longet, singer Little Richard and the improvisational Ace Trucking Company. Tom's singing style and the old Humphrey Bogart movies are spoofed.

★ ★ ★

THAT GIRL. 8 p.m., Channel 4. I Didn't Have the Vegas Notion, Part I (Repeat). Guest star Jack Cassidy as an insufferably arrogant nightclub star, and Ann's boy friend Don's initiation into the life style of Las Vegas, add up to a very funny opening half of this two-parter. Ann goes to Vegas as part of a club act and Don goes along for the weekend. While Ann fights to keep wolf Cassidy at bay, Don succumbs to the Vegas gambling fever and pulls a complete personality turnabout.

IRONSIDE. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. Love My Enemy (Repeat). Offbeat episode The Chief leaves San Francisco to act as security officer for the U.S. delegation negotiating for the release of prisoners from some "mythical" Oriental Communist country. The drama turns into a whodunit when the Chief of the Communist team becomes mysteriously ill. The story sustains interest and holds up because the writers have wisely not made all the Orientals villains.

BILL COSBY. 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6. Wally Cox joins Cosby for an excellent two-man show. Cox, a meek busboy, asks for suave, sophisticated Cosby's help to get a date . . . when it doesn't turn out the way he'd hoped, he decides there's only one way out — suicide.

THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7. Fanny (1961) (Repeat). The earthy magnificence of the seaport of Marseilles, the personal charm of Charles Boyer and Maurice Chevalier, and the attractiveness of Leslie Caron and Horst Buchholz, help to make this love story entertaining The tale about the parting of young lovers, a marriage of convenience, and a reunion that almost destroys everyone's life, is a bit overlong, but works fairly well most of the time. Director Joshua Logan chose to eliminate the songs from this straight film version based on the Broadway musical, although he does use the familiar score as background music.

★ ★ ★

DEAN MARTIN. 10 p.m., Channel 5 (Repeat). Sammy Davis Jr., Andy Griffith and Paul Lynde take over the show. Sammy and Dean horse around in a medley, and Sammy offers "Wichita Lineman." Andy Griffith plays a carnival barker, who sings to a tattooed lady, and then reverts to his Dad character, explaining sex to son Dean. Paul Lynde handles the remaining routines as a dance lesson salesman and a nightclub piano player being heckled by Martin and Griffith.

7:30 Channel 12: Sorrowful Jones (1949 Comedy), Bob Hope, Lucille Ball. Bookie Hope gets mixed up with racketeers and fixed races in this Damon Runyon story.

9:00 Channel 7: Fanny (1961 Comedy Drama), Leslie Caron, Horst Bucholtz, Maurice Chevalier. A tale of young lovers parting, a marriage of convenience, and a strange reunion.

11:00 Channel 11: The Desperadoes Are in Town (1956 Western), Robert Arthur, Kathy Nolan. Typical western about a kid trying to live down a reputation.

11:40 Channel 2: The Night of the Full Moon (1954 English Mystery) Dermot Walsh, Kathleen Byron. An American is chased over the English countryside by killers.

Shaving Wasteful, Cleric Says

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Unitarian Church minister wants all men in North America to stop shaving, as a start on the elimination of "unnecessary products."

Rev. Jack Kent, minister of the North Shore Unitarian Church told a Simon Fraser University audience in suburban Burnaby that North Americans spend $235,000,000 a year on razor blades, plus another $161,000,000 on shaving preparations.

He said his figures are for 1966, "and in the same year the total United Nations budget was $155,000,000."

"Each beard would be a clear statement to the world that we intend to repossess ourselves as men and will not continue to be creatures dominated by the latest technological trick of the most recent advertising campaign from Madison Avenue," Mr. Kent said.

He also called upon women to become proud of their natural hair, saying that American women in 1966 spent $1,600,000,000 on hair sprays, deodorants, lipsticks, hair coloring, face creams, mouthwash, hair tonic, nail polish, perfumes, makeup bases and hand lotion.

Mr. Kent said courage to drop other unnecessary products might then come. These might include paper towels, paper bag paper napkins, paper handkerchiefs and pesticides.

He also urged a drive on the auto industry and fossil fuels.

He said he plans to stop shaving, himself, as of today. And he is going to buy a bicycle.

Rival Racing Groups Unite

Vancouver Island Track Racing Association (VITRA) and the Victoria Automobile Racing Association (VARA), the two organizations which have raced at Western Speedway since 1965, are now amalgamated.

In making the announcement Wednesday, officials stated that amalgamation was approved unanimously by the general membership of both bodies.

The combined organization will retain the VITRA name. This was the parent body from which VARA split over a money dispute five years ago.

Union was brought about under two VARA conditions — that they be accepted as a unit, including both debts and assets, and that a new executive be elected by the combined membership.

THE RESULTS of an over-eager traveller is examined today by Chuck Smith and son, Robbie of 932 Old Esquimalt Road. City police report, however, that the trip early this morning lasted only 150 feet past the Mile O signpost at Douglas and Dallas where the offending vehicle was found abandoned with about $1,000 damage. The driver was turning apparently from Dallas to Douglas when the incident occurred about 3:40 a.m. Police are still investigating the crash that did about $500 damage to city property. Counsel Service Opened

DUNCAN — A counselling service manned by volunteers and designed to deal with marriage, family and financial problems opened here Wednesday.

Cowichan-Malahat MLA Robert Strachan, who addressed the official opening of the Cowichan-Malahat Family Counselling Service, referred to the service as "a necessary organization to help maintain the basic family structure."

The service seeks to help families cope better with the stresses and strains resulting from the demands of modern living.

The Duncan centre is the sixth of its type to open in B.C., said co-ordinator Mrs. Mary Jane Lewis.

Citizens have been invited to aid in the program through a donation or by training to become a counsellor or co-ordinator, said Mrs. Lewis.

So far 15 have volunteered.

"Anyone who wants to talk about a problem can see a counsellor. There's no age limit. We hope particularly teenagers and young people will take advantage of the service," she said.

"I want to emphasize that all counselling will be of a highly confidential nature. We hope people will use us and have confidence in us."

'Alarmists' Increasing Starvation

TORONTO (CP) — Alarmists who worry about trace drug residues in meat are contributing to starvation of the world's hungry, an environmental scientist said Wednesday.

Dr. Robert White-Stevens, chairman of the bureau of conservation and environmental science at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N.J., said such fears are holding back scientific farming.

He told the Canadian Animal Health Institute that scientific farms with high-density animal populations are the only way to meet protein needs of an exploding population. Only extensive programs of preventive medication in conjunction with high standards of sanitation and nutrition would permit operations at densities of 40,000 to 50,000 head of cattle.

Taxation Philosophy 'Wrong'

Canada's social needs are growing, but the white paper taxation philosophy to provide for them is wrong, said Canadian Chamber of Commerce president J. Allyn Taylor in Victoria.

Taylor, who is president of Canada Trust-Huron and Erie, said in an interview before addressing a luncheon meeting of the Victoria Chamber, that white paper emphasis on spending is wrong.

"Taxes should never destroy the incentive to save. There is great fear the proposals in the white paper put further discouragement on saving," said Taylor, noting that in the large number of briefs presented to the government from many sources there is much logic.

"All segments of the Canadian public have risen to protest. There is a groundswell the like of which I have never seen," he said.

One reason for the degree of inflation faced today is government overspending, and one reason for that is the concept of universal welfare, "whether we need it or not," said Taylor.

Yugoslav Ends Grand Slam Bid

PARIS (AP) — Zeljki Franulovic of Yugoslavia ruined Arthur Ashe's hopes of an elusive tennis grand slam Tuesday by upsetting the United States Davis Cup ace, 6-3, 3-6, 10-8, 4-6, 6-3, in the quarter-finals of the French Open.

Ashe's defeat left Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., the sole American men's survivor in the semi-finals. Rickey surprised Ilie Nastase of Romania, rated Europe's top clay court player, 7-5, 9-7, 4-6, 6-3.

Ex-Lark Joins New York Squad

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Giants of the National Football League announced the signing of John Baker, 260-pound defensive end who played out his option in the Canadian Football League.

Baker, 27, originally was drafted by the NFL Green Bay Packers in 1964 but went to Canada where he played with Montreal Alouettes.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

SASKATOON—Dr. Lou Goodwin, physical education director at the University of Calgary, has been elected president of the Western Canadian Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association.

Golden Eagles Collect McNabb

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Western Hockey League announced Tuesday they have acquired Larry McNabb from the Boston Bruin organization.

McNabb, a 10-year veteran of professional hockey, divided last season between Salt Lake and Hershey of the American Hockey League.

McNabb, 30, has played for Spokane, Vancouver, San Francisco and San Diego in the WHL.

REF BEATER'S TEAM ALSO PAYS PENALTY

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto and District Soccer league has expelled an entire team and imposed a 10-year suspension on one of its players for allegedly striking a referee.

Suspended for 10 years was Carmen Sortino. Expelled from the league was his entire team, Pachinesi, which had been starting its second season in the eastern section of the second division.

Orr Assisting Salary Play

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Defenceman Don Awrey wants $50,000 from Boston Bruins to play in the 1970-'71 National Hockey League season.

Awrey said in an interview his contract is up for renewal "and I'm going to ask for $50,000."

"If they don't want to pay me, they can trade me."

The 26-year-old player, who has completed five seasons in the NHL, said the reason for his asking for more money is partly because he was teamed up with Bobby Orr last season.

Orr will be able to command about $200,000 in his next contract, he said, "and if this is so, then I feel that I'm at least a quarter as good as Bobby."

'FLEXIBILITY' NEEDED

Age Lowering Questioned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The John Howard Society of British Columbia and the Children's Aid Society of Vancouver Wednesday expressed reservations about the lowering of the juvenile age to 17 from 18.

"Although I haven't been informed just what the change means, I certainly hope it includes some special program for dealing with the 17-to-23-year-olds in a flexible way," said Mervyn Davis, executive director of the John Howard Society, which works with the rehabilitation of young offenders.

"I hope the attorney-general has set up a program for managing the young offender without necessarily giving him a criminal record that will follow him for the rest of his life.

"I think young offenders should be given a chance to mend their ways. A criminal record tends to drive people into a corner and we don't want any more alienated people than we've got already."

He also asked if the change would amend the Protection of Children Act which now covers children 17 and under.

HEAVIER FINES

Judge Winifred Murphy, senior judge in the family division of the provincial court in Vancouver, said 17-year-olds now will be subject to the heavier fines and sentences of adults.

"In the juvenile court, the maximum fine is only $25," she said.

Judge Murphy said youngsters may find themselves in Oakalla Prison Farm or even the B.C. Penitentiary.

"I don't think it's good for them to be classed as adult offenders," she said. "It'll be much harder on them, but it might have the effect of deterring many of them if they know they'll be treated as adults."

Until now, Judge Murphy said a first offender in juvenile court had the benefit of the court's rehabilitation facility.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson also announced Wednesday that juveniles will no longer be exempt from prosecutions for provincial violations, such as liquor and traffic offences.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Inland areas of B.C. had variable cloudiness, much cooler temperatures and widely scattered showers today in the wake of a Pacific cold front. However, skies will be mostly sunny and temperatures a little higher in the interior on Friday as a ridge of high pressure builds over the coast. South coastal areas will be generally sunny Friday but an onshore flow of moist air will keep the north coast mainly cloudy.

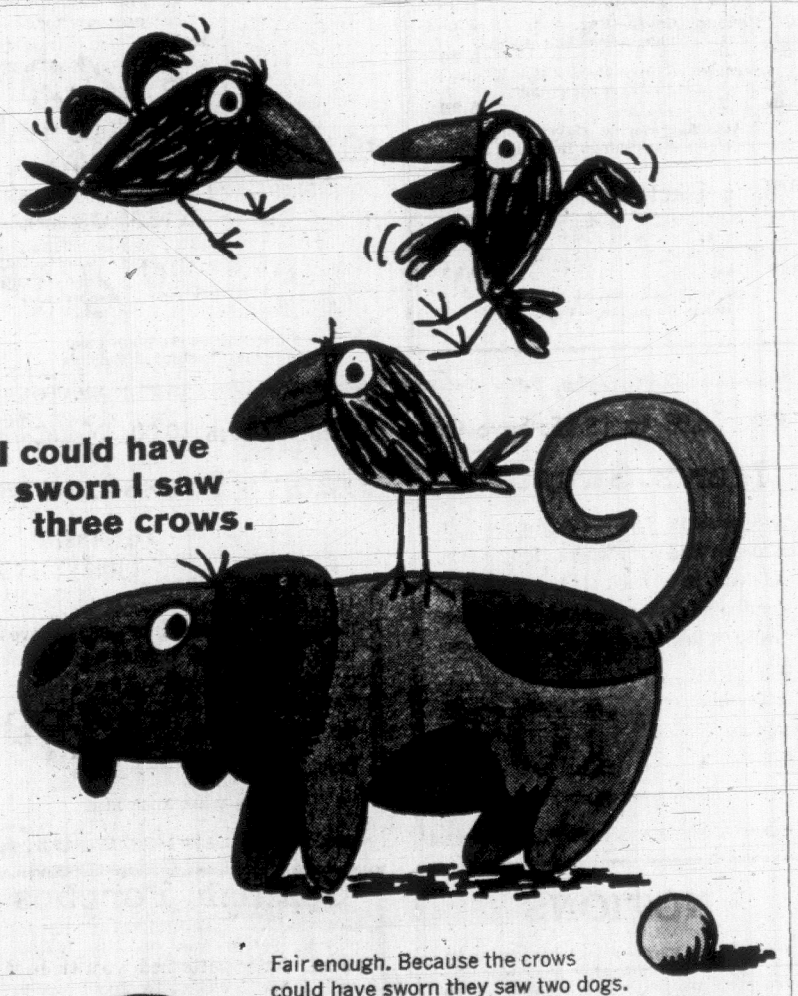
The Weather and You

By Carl Riblet Jr.

One good reason for promoting the increase across the country of convalescent hospitals is the weather. With hospitals so crowded these days, and so expensive it will be a wonderful thing when people can leave the intensive care of a hospital ward for the less expensive care of an adjoining convalescent place.

When a doctor steps out of his house in the morning, he can tell with a glance at the sky what he will find at the hospital. If the day is gloomy and wet he knows that his hospitalized patients will be depressed and not so anxious to go home. If the sun is shining, some of the convalescents will want to go home right away.

When hospitals have convalescent homes the weather may not keep some of the patients in beds that are needed for others. They can recover less expensively in on-the-way-home surroundings no matter what the weather.



Fair enough. Because the crows could have sworn they saw two dogs. And if you look closer, you'll probably think you see four Indians. Or is it six?

No two people in our brewery agree on just how many there are of what on the Old Style label. But we're all together on one thing. How to brew the great beer behind it. That's done the slow, natural, old-time way. For a flavour you can always count on.

Help You Sell Women's Wear

Every Day of the Week!

Victoria women love to shop. They love it so much they do it twice—first in the Victoria daily newspapers — then in their favorite stores.

They are constantly checking for fashion news in the popular women's pages. Then they watch the advertising to find out where to purchase the wearing apparel they want. Why experiment with media unproved in retail advertising; media with doubtful feminine readership; media which falls short of total coverage of your selling potential.

MOVE 'POLITICAL WIN'

Way to Peace . . . Military Victory

'I can now state that this has been the most successful operation of this long and difficult war.' —NIXON

By CHALMERS ROBERTS
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Wednesday night did exactly what this capital had expected him to do — declare victory in Cambodia and announce a big new American troop withdrawal from South Vietnam before election day.

He even showed the TV-viewing public some of the captured weapons, and the White House put out a list of what had been swept up "as of 4:00 p.m. June 3, 1970."

In short, Nixon gloried in what he termed the "most successful operation of this long and difficult war." He reminded the critics of their cries of disaster, and he swore they were proven wrong.

While June 30 remains the deadline for the last American to get out of Cambodia, the president kept open his option for further "air missions" after that date, and he left the South Vietnamese all the room in the world to keep up their incursions into Cambodia.

On the short term, the weight of the evidence is with the president on what has been accomplished by the military action inside Cambodia. The real problem is long-term: what comes after Cambodia, what will the enemy do, is there any hope of a negotiated settlement?

In discussing the long term, the president conceded that "there is one basic commitment" he has made that is "yet to be fulfilled" — ending the war. His prescription remains the same: Gradually turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese if the North Vietnamese will not negotiate as he sees negotiations.

His unspoken but implicit aim remains: A South Vietnam free of Communist domination. Given the stalemate at the Paris peace table, that amounts to a military victory as the way to peace.

As to negotiations, Nixon said all past offers remain on the table, but he made no new offers. And if Hanoi will not negotiate on those offers and instead respond militarily, they will

'MEDIEVAL, ILL-EQUIPPED'

MPs Condemn B.C. Pen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Members of the Parliamentary justice committee Wednesday labelled the federal British Columbia Penitentiary "ancient, medieval, outmoded and ill-equipped for the modern prison concept of rehabilitation."

Donald R. Tolmie (L — Welland), chairman of the 12-man committee, said the maximum security prison is 100 years old and was built in an age when punishment was the only criterion.

The committee came close to a confrontation with penitentiary officials when prisoners in the segregation unit alleged they were given daily release periods only after authorities were advised of the MPs' tour.

Prison officials said those prisoners usually take part in a work program, but added that there was no work for them until Monday.

Assistant Deputy Warden T. J. Ellis said the release order was made before anything was known about the committee's tour.

He said most of the segregated prisoners are sex offenders — considered to be the lowest form of criminal by other inmates — and are usually in the "hole" at their own request, either for self protection or because they can't face up to life as a part of the prison population.

"This shouldn't be allowed to exist," said Robert McCleve (PC — Halifax).

"These men will be mental wrecks when they are released."

"I have to fight an aggressive nature," he said.

"But in here, I have to fight back to stay alive, and this defeated the whole purpose.

WANTS MATSQUI

Kannister asked the committee to "give us the women's section at Matsqui Prison" and Douglas Hogarth (L — New Westminster) thought it was a good idea.

"It was designed for 150 women," said Hogarth.

"There were 22 there during our visit Tuesday. At this rate, it is costing the taxpayers $23,000 a year for each woman inmate."

A prison is to be built in the Mission area in the Fraser Valley east of Vancouver to phase out the B.C Penitentiary, but committee members said it hasn't been decided if maximum security facilities will be included.

Hogarth said he is looking forward to the day when the last penitentiary brick is removed.

"The prison program of allowing inmates out for short periods of training and rehabilitation is the only incentive these men have," he said.

The tour of the New Westminster prison completed the committee's B.C. visit. Earlier it had inspected the Matsqui institution, Agassiz Mountain Prison, the Agassiz Work Camp and the Georgia Release Centre in Vancouver.

Today, it visits the penitentiary in Prince Albert, Sask., prior to returning to Ottawa. The committee is expected to make recommendations to Solicitor-General George McIlraith and may submit a direct report to the Commons.

Red Paper Fine —Not Red Power

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Harold Cardinal's Red Paper approach to the Cabinet was welcomed here today, but not his indication that if it fails he'll switch to Red Power tactics.

Before leading a delegation of 150 Indian Association of Alberta members, and several B.C. chiefs, to present the Red Paper to the government, Cardinal told a reporter he was ready for a long struggle if the Trudeau administration resists the proposals.

"Our movement is going to last longer than any politician," he said.

And he added that if the Cabinet turns down the Red Paper, Canada's 238,000 Indians "may have to consider the route of civil disobedience."

"I don't buy this social dissent bit and I don't believe most Indians will either," he said in an interview.

CARDINAL
. . . Indian spokesman

"He might choose it, and a few other individuals too, but the basic Indian community is stable and sound. It is not given social dissent.

"It would rather discuss and debate the issues to bring change."

However, without having seen the Red Paper's contents, he praised its existence as a manifestation of a new mood among Indians.

"Today's exercise is a useful thing and this is the way it has to be done — solid, researched and well-produced written counter-proposals," he said.

NO DIALOGUE

"For too long there has been no dialogue between Indians and the government and policy has been made in a paternalistic vacuum.

U.S. Says Embargo Will Stay

Times News Services

The White House and U.S. state department denied Wednesday that any decision had been made to lift the so-called "selective embargo" on shipment of major weapons to Greece.

A story in Wednesday's editions of the Washington Post, which described shipments of planes, tanks and Howitzers last year under a 1968 decision by President Johnson, and said the Nixon administration had decided "in principle" to lift the three-year-old embargo entirely, was described as "misleading" by spokesman John King.

King said "some aircraft" — he would not give their type or number — and minesweepers had been sent under the Johnson decision, which he noted had been announced by the state department on Oct. 22, 1968.

But other officials denied flatly that any tanks had been authorized or sent.

Jet Kidnapped

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner with 51 passengers was hijacked over Arizona today by a man demanding $100,000,000 in small bills delivered to him when the plane landed in Washington, a TWA spokesman said.

Break in Towboat Strike Seen by Guild Spokesman

Times News Services

Merchant Service Guild chief negotiator Capt. Arne Davis following a negotiating session which ended 4 a.m. today hinted at the possible break.

He said he could offer no details about the actual negotiations and did not elaborate except to say the guild is aware of close support from other unions.

In B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday, the guild was fined $5,000 by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm for contempt of court. The guild ignored an injunction banning picketing at a pulp mill on Howe Sound, just north of Vancouver. The plant closed when 400 workers refused to cross the guild picket line.

The towboat strike has hit hard at the B.C. forest industry, because the tugs are used to tow logs to the sawmills, and to tow away barges of sawdust. Supervisory personnel are operating some tugs, but all products handled this way have been declared "hot" by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

EXPIRES JUNE 15

The IWA contract itself expires June 15 and affects almost 30,000 men in southern B.C. About half already are out of work because of the tug dispute. Mediation officer Clive McKeen conducted exploratory talks Wednesday in the forestry dispute, meeting both sides separately.

In the pulp and paper industry, negotiations have

Bennett Asks Lockout End On Schools

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett today appealed to both sides in the construction industry lockout to make a "special effort" to proceed with construction of schools and hospitals.

He also announced he has asked for an immediate cut in the prime interest rate charged by chartered banks from 8½ to 7½ per cent to stimulate the economy.

But Bennett, just back from a successful Japanese tour, expressed confidence in B.C.'s economy as "the best in the nation" and looked forward to a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year.

"Nobody should be fearful," he told a press conference, adding that all it will take for "a really good year" is for management and labor to get

Troop Pullouts Denied

Times News Services

A U.S. command spokesman in Saigon today refuted President Nixon's statement Wednesday night that U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam have been resumed.

Nixon in his television speech in Washington said:

"As a result of the success of the Cambodia operations, Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird has resumed the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. Fifty thousand of the 150,000 I announced April 2 will be out by Oct. 15."

But the U.S. command in Saigon, when questioned on the withdrawal, denied any troop pullout.

"Everything's still static now," said a spokesman.

Nixon told the American people the Cambodian operation had been a success.

Calling the attacks on the Communist sanctuaries "the most successful operation of this long and difficult war," he said that "we will keep our timetable for troop withdrawals."

The withdrawals, which were halted in late April because of the Cambodian operation, now have been resumed, the president said.

SHOWED FILM

The president used film and captured material to illustrate his argument that huge quantities of supplies have been captured in the operation he announced on April 30.

He said that the success to date "has guaranteed that the June 30 deadline I set for withdrawal of all American troops from Cambodia will be met."

When he announced the Cambodian operation, the president said, critics charged that it would "increase American casualties, widen

Postal Talks Resume

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Rotating strikes kept about 1,600 postal workers off the job today as unions stepped up the pressure in their contract dispute with the government.

Latest to join the walkouts, as representatives of the unions and the government reopened negotiations this morning for the first time since mediation efforts ground to a halt, were 350 workers in Saskatoon and eight other Saskatchewan centres.

The Council of Postal Unions and the government's treasury board negotiators met today for the first time since mediator A. W. R. Carrothers, called in last week, packed up his efforts. Carrothers, ending his mediation attempt Tuesday, said neither side was willing to budge enough to warrant continuation of mediation.

NO COMMENT

Representatives of both sides refused to comment on whether they expected progress at today's meeting.

National union headquarters is orchestrating the rotating strike calls through a teletype network.

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A stormy Liberal caucus session Wednesday finally agreed that Finance Minister Edgar Benson should sound out the provinces this week on their reactions to a proposal to impose compulsory wage, price and profit guidelines.

Unemployment stirred up the storm behind the closed doors, where worried Liberal backbenchers spoke freely. They voiced alarm over the mounting proportions of the unemployment problem, linking it with the federal government's anti-inflation restraints.

Benson as the finance minister was again the storm centre. He has already been the target of criticism for his proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Now the Liberal MPs are very worried by the growing numbers of unemployed.

It is understood the government acknowledged that the numbers of unemployed were greater than it expected would develop from its anti-inflation program.

How best to cope with the situation was discussed. The imposition of compulsory wage, price and profit controls and the easing of anti-inflation restraints both were debated.

Arguments for and against applying mandatory guidelines for prices, profits and wages were heard. Those opposed warned that the country had gone through the hard experience of such controls during the war and should avoid them at all costs. Others advocated controls and contended Canadians would learn to live with them.

When he meets with the provincial treasurers from the 10 provinces in Winnipeg Friday and Saturday, Benson will sound out their reaction

WOMAN SENTENCED TO FOUR MONTHS

'Attitude Your Biggest Enemy'

Leslie Marie Viszket, 20, address unknown, was sentenced Wednesday by Judge William Ostler to four months in prison on each of three counts of false pretences over $50, to be served concurrently.

She pleaded guilty May 25 to the offences which involved using three credit cards of her fellow employees to obtain goods from Eaton's, The Bay and Woodwards worth more than $1,600. The offences occurred during April and May.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had a previous conviction for dishonesty and he described the actions of Mrs. Viszket with the credit cards as "wilful and wicked" and "totally irresponsible."

Ostler told the accused that her life would be so much happier and simpler if she considered others rather than always herself.

He said her attitude was her biggest enemy and added that she was the author of her own misfortune.

Violet Ann Weed, 21, of 547 Niagara, was fined $300 when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting. She was observed taking several items from The Bay Valued at $18.94 and leave without paying for them.

Robert Randolph Burnham, 24, of 2853 Graham, was fined $400 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

A partially-smoked marijuana cigarette was found by police in the accused's jacket pocket May 24 when it was searched in his home.

The accused produced a plastic bag containing more of the substance when asked if he had any more.

Poverty Blamed

OTTAWA (CP) — Bad economic conditions are a major cause of ill-health among the poor, the Canadian Nurses Association told the Senate poverty committee today.

In a brief to the committee, the association urged treatment of the cause of illness, poverty, rather than the symptoms alone. Health care costs would be reduced as poverty was removed.

The association, which has 82,000 members, said that in "sheer weight of numbers" and the nature of their work, nurses have more experience with poverty and its effects than any other group in Canada.

The poverty committee was told that more financial aid is needed to prepare nurses for community health programs. Experimental projects, such as neighborhood health programs, should be encouraged.

Care for the elderly poor should be stepped up. More programs are needed for training leaders in poor communities to work with public health agencies.

Shaving Wasteful, Cleric Says

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Unitarian Church minister wants all men in North America to stop shaving, as a start on the elimination of "unnecessary products."

Rev. Jack Kent, minister of the North Shore Unitarian Church told a Simon Fraser University audience in suburban Burnaby that North Americans spend $235,000,000 a year on razor blades, plus another $161,000,000 on shaving preparations.

He said his figures are for 1966, "and in the same year the total United Nations budget was $155,000,000."

"Each beard would be a clear statement to the world that we intend to repossess ourselves as men and will not continue to be creatures dominated by the latest technological trick of the most recent advertising campaign from Madison Avenue," Mr. Kent said.

He also called upon women to become proud of their natural hair, saying that American women in 1966 spent $1,600,000,000 on hair sprays, deodorants, lipsticks, hair coloring, face creams, mouthwash, hair tonic, nail polish, perfumes, makeup bases and hand lotion.

Mr. Kent said courage to drop other unnecessary products might then come. These might include paper towels, paper bag paper napkins, paper handkerchiefs and pesticides.

He also urged a drive on the auto industry and fossil fuels.

He said he plans to stop shaving, himself, as of today. And he is going to buy a bicycle.

Rival Racing Groups Unite

Vancouver Island Track Racing Association (VITRA) and the Victoria Automobile Racing Association (VARA), the two organizations which have raced at Western Speedway since 1965, are now amalgamated.

In making the announcement Wednesday, officials stated that amalgamation was approved unanimously by the general membership of both bodies.

The combined organization will retain the VITRA name. This was the parent body from which VARA split over a money dispute five years ago.

Union was brought about under two VARA conditions — that they be accepted as a unit, including both debts and assets, and that a new executive be elected by the combined membership.

THE RESULTS of an over-eager traveller is examined today by Chuck Smith and son, Robbie of 932 Old Esquimalt Road. City police report, however, that the trip early this morning lasted only 150 feet past the Mile O signpost at Douglas and Dallas where the offending vehicle was found abandoned with about $1,000 damage. The driver was turning apparently from Dallas to Douglas when the incident occurred about 3:40 a.m. Police are still investigating the crash that did about $500 damage to city property. Counsel Service Opened

DUNCAN — A counselling service manned by volunteers and designed to deal with marriage, family and financial problems opened here Wednesday.

Cowichan-Malahat MLA Robert Strachan, who addressed the official opening of the Cowichan-Malahat Family Counselling Service, referred to the service as "a necessary organization to help maintain the basic family structure."

The service seeks to help families cope better with the stresses and strains resulting from the demands of modern living.

The Duncan centre is the sixth of its type to open in B.C., said co-ordinator Mrs. Mary Jane Lewis.

Citizens have been invited to aid in the program through a donation or by training to become a counsellor or co-ordinator, said Mrs. Lewis.

So far 15 have volunteered.

"Anyone who wants to talk about a problem can see a counsellor. There's no age limit. We hope particularly teenagers and young people will take advantage of the service," she said.

"I want to emphasize that all counselling will be of a highly confidential nature. We hope people will use us and have confidence in us."

'Alarmists' Increasing Starvation

TORONTO (CP) — Alarmists who worry about trace drug residues in meat are contributing to starvation of the world's hungry, an environmental scientist said Wednesday.

Dr. Robert White-Stevens, chairman of the bureau of conservation and environmental science at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N.J., said such fears are holding back scientific farming.

He told the Canadian Animal Health Institute that 'scientific farms with high-density animal populations are the only way to meet protein needs of an exploding population. Only extensive programs of preventive medication in conjunction with high standards of sanitation and nutrition would permit operations at densities of 40,000 to 50,000 head of cattle.

Taxation Philosophy 'Wrong'

Canada's social needs are growing, but the white paper taxation philosophy to provide for them is wrong, said Canadian Chamber of Commerce president J. Allyn Taylor in Victoria.

Taylor, who is president of Canada Trust-Huron and Erie, said in an interview before addressing a luncheon meeting of the Victoria Chamber, that white paper emphasis on spending is wrong.

"Taxes should never destroy the incentive to save. There is great fear the proposals in the white paper put further discouragement on saving," said Taylor, noting that in the large number of briefs presented to the government from many sources there is much logic.

"All segments of the Canadian public have risen to protest. There is a groundswell the like of which I have never seen," he said.

One reason for the degree of inflation faced today is government overspending, and one reason for that is the concept of universal welfare, "whether we need it or not," said Taylor.

Orr Assisting Salary Play

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Defenceman Don Awrey wants $50,000 from Boston Bruins to play in the 1970-'71 National Hockey League season.

Awrey said in an interview his contract is up for renewal "and I'm going to ask for $50,000."

"If they don't want to pay me, they can trade me."

The 26-year-old player, who has completed five seasons in the NHL, said the reason for his asking for more money is partly because he was teamed up with Bobby Orr last season.

Orr will be able to command about $200,000 in his next contract, he said.

MOVE 'POLITICAL WIN'

Way to Peace . . . Military Victory

'I can now state that this has been the most successful operation of this long and difficult war.' —NIXON

By CHALMERS ROBERTS
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Wednesday night did exactly what this capital had expected him to do — declare victory in Cambodia and announce a big new American troop withdrawal from South Vietnam before election day.

He even showed the TV-viewing public some of the captured weapons, and the White House put out a list of what had been swept up "as of 4:00 p.m. June 3, 1970."

In short, Nixon gloried in what he termed the "most successful operation of this long and difficult war." He reminded the critics of their cries of disaster, and he swore they were proven wrong.

While June 30 remains the deadline for the last American to get out of Cambodia, the president kept open his option for further "air missions" after that date, and he left the South Vietnamese all the room in the world to keep up their incursions into Cambodia.

On the short term, the weight of the evidence is with the president on what has been accomplished by the military action inside Cambodia. The real problem is long-term: what comes after Cambodia, what will the enemy do, is there any hope of a negotiated settlement?

In discussing the long term, the president conceded that "there is one basic commitment" he has made that is "yet to be fulfilled" — ending the war. His prescription remains the same: Gradually turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese if the North Vietnamese will not negotiate as he sees negotiations.

His unspoken but implicit aim remains: A South Vietnam free of Communist domination. Given the stalemate at the Paris peace table, that amounts to a military victory as the way to peace.

As to negotiations, Nixon said all past offers remain on the table, but he made no new offers. And if Hanoi will not negotiate on those offers and instead respond militarily, they will

'MEDIEVAL, ILL-EQUIPPED'

MPs Condemn B.C. Pen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Members of the Parliamentary justice committee Wednesday labelled the federal British Columbia Penitentiary "ancient, medieval, outmoded and ill-equipped for the modern prison concept of rehabilitation."

Donald R. Tolmie (L — Welland), chairman of the 12-man committee, said the maximum security prison is 100 years old and was built in an age when punishment was the only criterion.

The committee came close to a confrontation with penitentiary officials when prisoners in the segregation unit alleged they were given daily release periods only after authorities were advised of the MPs' tour.

Prison officials said those prisoners usually take part in a work program, but added that there was no work for them until Monday.

Assistant Deputy Warden, T. J. Ellis said the release order was made before anything was known about the committee's tour.

He said most of the segrated prisoners are sex offenders — considered to be the lowest form of criminal by other inmates — and are usually in the "hole" at their own request, either for self protection or because they can't face up to life as a part of the prison population.

"This shouldn't be allowed to exist," said Robert McCleve (PC — Halifax).

"These men will be mental wrecks when they are released."

"I have to fight an aggressive nature," he said.

"But in here, I have tto fight back to stay alive, and this defeated the whole purpose.

WANTS MATSQUI

Kannister asked the committee to "give us the women's section at Matsqui Prison" and Douglas Hogarth (L — New Westminster) thought it was a good idea.

"It was designed for 150 women," said Hogarth.

"There were 22 there during our visit Tuesday. At this rate, it is costing the taxpayers $23,000 a year for each woman inmate."

A prison is to be built in the Mission area in the Fraser Valley east of Vancouver to phase out the B.C Penitentiary, but committee members said it hasn't been decided if maximum security facilities will be included.

Hogarth said he is looking forward to the day when the last penitentiary brick is removed.

"The prison program of allowing inmates out for short periods of training and rehabilitation is the only incentive these men have," he said.

The tour of the New Westminster prison completed the committee's B.C. visit. Earlier it had inspected the Matsqui Institution, Agassiz Mountain Prison, the Agassiz Work Camp and the Georgia Release Centre in Vancouver.

Today, it visits the penitentiary in Prince Albert, Sask., prior to returning to Ottawa. The committee is expected to make recommendations to Solicitor General George McIlraith and may submit a direct report to the Commons.

Red Paper Fine —Not Red Power

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Harold Cardinal's Red Paper approach to the Cabinet was welcomed here today, but not his indication that if it fails he'll switch to Red Power tactitcs.

Before leading a delegation of 150 Indian Association of Alberta members, and several B.C. chiefs, to present the Red Paper to the government, Cardinal told a reporter he was ready for a long struggle if the Trudeau administration resists the proposals.

"Our movement is going to last longer than any politician," he said.

And he added that if the Cabinet turns down the Red Paper, Canada's 238,000 Indians "may have to consider the route of civil disobedience."

"I don't buy this social dissent bit and I don't believe most Indians will either," he said in an interview.

CARDINAL
. . . Indian spokesman

"He might choose it, and a few other individuals too, but the basic Indian community is stable and sound. It is not given social dissent.

"It would rather discuss and debate the issues to bring change."

However, without having seen the Red Paper's contents, he praised its existence as a manifestation of a new mood among Indians.

"Today's exercise is a useful thing and this is the way it has to be done — solid, researched and well-produced written counter-proposals," he said.

NO DIALOGUE

"For too long there has been no dialogue between Indians and the government and policy has been made in a paternalistic vacuum.

U.S. Says Embargo Will Stay

The White House and U.S. state department denied Wednesday that any decision had been made to lift the so-called "selective embargo" on shipment of major weapons to Greece.

A story in Wednesday's editions of the Washington Post, which described shipments of planes, tanks and Howitzers last year under a 1968 decision by President Johnson, and said the Nixon administration had decided "in principle" to lift the three-year-old embargo entirely, was described as "misleading "by spokesman John King.

King said "some aircraft" — he would not give their type or number — and minesweepers had been sent under the Johnson decision, which he noted had been announced by the state department on Oct. 22, 1968.

But other officials denied flatly that any tanks had been authorized or sent, and said they knew of no shipment of Howitzers.

Jet Kidnapped

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A Trans World Airlines jetliner with 51 passengers was hijacked over Arizona today by a man demanding $100,000,000 in small bills delivered to him when the plane landed in Washington, a TWA spokesman said.

Break in Towboat Strike Seen by Guild Spokesman

Times News Service

He said he could offer no details about the actual negotiations and did not elaborate except to say the guild is aware of close support from other unions.

In B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday, the guild was fined $5,000 by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm for contempt of court. The guild ignored an injunction banning picketing at a pulp mill on Howe Sound, just north of Vancouver. The plant closed when 400 workers refused to cross the guild picket line.

The towboat strike has hit hard at the B.C. forest industry, because the tugs are used to tow logs to the sawmills, and to tow away barges of sawdust. Supervisory personnel are operating some tugs, but all products handled this way have been declared "hot" by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

EXPIRES JUNE 15

The IWA contract itself expires June 15 and affects almost 30,000 men in southern B.C. About half already are out of work because of the tug dispute. Mediation officer Clive McKeen conducted exploratory talks Wednesday in the forestry dispute, meeting both sides separately.

In the pulp and paper industry, negotiations have

Bennett Asks Lockout End On Schools

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett today appealed to both sides in the construction industry lockout to make a "special effort" to proceed with construction of schools and hospitals.

He also announced he has asked for an immediate cut in the prime interest rate charged by chartered banks from 8½ to 7½ per cent to stimulate the economy.

But Bennett, just back from a successful Japanese tour, expressed confidence in B.C.'s economy as "the best in the nation" and looked forward to a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year.

"Nobody should be fearful," he told a press conference, adding that all it will take for "a really good year" is for management and labor to get

Troop Pullouts Denied

TIMES NEWS SERVICES

U.S. command spokesman in Saigon today refuted President Nixon's statement Wednesday night that U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam have been resumed.

Nixon in his television speech in Washington said:

"As a result of the success of the Cambodia operations, Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird has resumed the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. Fifty thousand of the 150,000 I announced April 2 will be out by Oct. 15."

But the U.S. command in Saigon, when questioned on the withdrawal, denied any troop pullout.

Nixon told the American people the Cambodian operation had been a success.

Calling the attacks on the Communist sanctuaries "the most successful operation of this long and difficult war," he said that "we will keep our timetable for troop withdrawals."

The withdrawals, which were halted in late April because of the Cambodian operation, now have been resumed, the president said.

SHOWED FILM

The president used film and captured material to illustrate his argument that huge quantities of supplies have been captured in the operation he announced on April 30.

He said that the success to date "has guaranteed that the June 30 deadline I set for withdrawal of all American troops from Cambodia will be met."

When he announced the Cambodian operation, the president said, critics charged that it would "increase American casualties, widen

Benson to Seek Pay, Price Controls

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A stormy Liberal caucus session Wednesday finally agreed that Finance Minister Edgar Benson should sound out the provinces this week on their reactions to a proposal to impose compulsory wage, price and profit guidelines.

Unemployment stirred up the storm behind the closed doors, where worried Liberal backbenchers spoke freely. They voiced alarm over the mounting proportions of the unemployment problem, linking it with the federal government's anti-inflatiin restraints.

Benson as the finance minister was again the storm centre. He has already been the target of criticism for his proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Now the Liberal MPs are very worried by the growing numbers of unemployed.

It is understood the government acknowledged that the numbers of unemployed were greater than it expected would develop from its anti-inflation program.

How best to cope with the situation was discussed. The imposition of compulsory wage, price and profit controls and the easing of anti-inflation restraints both were debated.

Arguments for and against applying mandatory guidelines for prices, profits and wages were heard. Those opposed warned that the country had gone through the hard experience of such controls during the war and should avoid them at all costs. Others advocated controls and contended Canadians would learn to live with them.

When he meets with the provincial treasurers from the 10 provinces in Winnipeg Friday and Saturday, Benson will sound out their reaction

P & O LINER ON WAY TO ALASKA

Arcadia Anchors Outside, Docking Too Risky

It was man the lifeboats and a cup of coffee at dockside this morning when the P & O liner Arcadia visited Victoria on the first of six Alaskan cruises scheduled for the season.

Due to dock in the early hours of the morning at Ogden Point, the towboat strike and 20-knot westerly winds changed her plans.

Her skipper, Capt. Edmund Cowan, decided not to take a chance on docking the huge 30,000-ton liner and instead dropped the hook at 5:45 a.m. in Esquimalt Harbor.

A few hours later her 600 passengers were being ferried ashore in some of the 24 covered lifeboats the Arcadia carries.

As they came ashore they were greeted with cups of coffee, served from a canopied stand, set up by members of the purser's crew.

Some of the passengers, most of them elderly, had trouble mounting the gangway, made steep by the ebb tide, but all were in good humor.

One woman quipped: "I don't mind — it gives me a chance to hold a good-looking man's hand!"

Another said the emergency landing was highly preferrable to their last call, made in Sitka, Alaska.

"We did the same thing there — but in miserable rain."

A man standing near her suggested the cruise organizers should make the Victoria stop four days instead of 12 hours.

"They could show us color slides of the other places."

Two Los Angeles women, Mrs. Anna Hoag and Mrs. Anna Nunn, said the best part of the cruise for them had been the service they had received from the crew.

"You can't beat the British!"

On this trip, Arcadia has more crew than passengers. She carries a complement of 625, about 400 of them hailing from India and Pakistan.

★ ★ ★

Manning the lifeboats, the Indian deck hands made a colorful sight in their native rig, almost making up for the bands, flowers and oratory cancelled out by the last-minute anchoring.

Civic dignitaries and other officials had an extra bonus of a boat ride to and from the reception and luncheon held in the ship today.

SHUTTLE SERVICE between the P & O liner Arcadia and the jetty in the Esquimalt Graving Dock is provided by some of the ship's lifeboats. About 100 passengers will board Arcadia in Victoria en route to California waters.

200 Dockmen Facing Layoff

By STEVE HUME

About 200 longshoremen will be idled next week when stockpiles of finished lumber at Ogden Point are exahusted.

A total of 140 regular and 60 casual longshoremen will be out of work.

Hector Campbell, general manager of Westcan Terminals Ltd. said Wednesday remaining supplies of finished lumber awaiting shipment overseas would last the rest of this week.

"We are just about out of stockpiled lumber, and after this week we'll be out of stock, he said.

George Dawson of King Bros. Ltd., shipping agents, said there isn't likely to be more than a trickle of finished lumber available when stockpiles go.

The towboat strike and subsequent slowdown of the forest industry are responsible for cutting off the supply of finished lumber for shipment overseas.

NOT TO SERIOUS

Fred Ritchie, wharf agent for Canadian National Railways wharf operations, says his end of things will not be affected quite so severely.

"Our personnel is minimal anyway so we won't feel it too seriously," he says. "We'd maintain our watchmen, and we still have a summer season of cruise vessels to fall back on."

"Most of the ships plan on coming in without assistance because tugboat crews are on strike.

"Coming in without assistance is tricky and an inconvenience but if the weather's right there's no danger. The last few freighters have come in and out without tug assistance — it was a bit touch and go with one but they can do it.

He says that if weather conditions are unfavorable cruise ships will go to anchor off Esquimalt.

The P & O liner Arcadia, in Victoria today, was unable to dock this morning because of weather and anchored off Esquimalt.

Burial Firms Oppose Park At Ross Bay

A Victoria funeral director is vehement about parks superintendant Herb Warren's suggestion that Ross Bay Cemetery be turned into a park.

"They can't do it," said William Hayward of Hayward's Funeral Chapel.

"People have paid for deep interment plots and the city will have to reimburse them if they take over the cemetery. That they can't afford to do."

SECOND BURIAL

"There are a lot of people that are still sentimental about death and they want to be buried with their family."

There will be a public outcry if the city pushes the issue, said Hayward.

Torry McCall of McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel agreed.

"I don't think people would take too kindly to such a move in the near future," said McCall.

WASTE OF PROPERTY

"I'm all for it," said Hendy. "Ross Bay Cemetery is just a waste of good property right now.

"If people were assured the plots would remain I don't think they would object."

Certain sections of the cemetery could be preserved intact, such as was done in Pioneer Park, as a reminder of the historical significance of the cemetery, he said.

'Beggars' Plan Demonstration

The Victoria Committee on Unemployment, 50 members strong, will march on Victoria city hall next Wednesday, to ask for beggars' licences.

A meeting of the committee's executive Wednesday night decided the demonstration and picketing actions were necessary to dramatize the extent of the unemployment problem in Victoria.

Committee spokesman Frank Cox said today the group will have members at the welfare and Manpower offices with information sheets on unemployment conditions and what to do about them.

Cox said the committee will also send members to Vancouver to affiliate with two similar unemployed citizens groups there.

The demonstration at city hall is set for 2 p.m. And information pickets will be at Manpower and city welfare from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. five days a week.

Cox said the next meeting of the committee is Friday, June 5, at a time and place to be announced later.

The Victoria Committee on Unemployment is a group of unemployed citizens who have recently formed to seek ways of finding jobs.

In meetings last week they decided to petition the welfare and unemployment insurance assistance.

Pollution Blamed On Housewives

Greater Victoria housewives were named today as the main environment pollutants via detergent phosphates.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior metro health officer, made the charge in a letter to Victoria's health committee. The committee had asked Whitbread to check on the volume of phosphates being used in commercial plants and local cleaning institutions such as hospitals.

PREFER SOAP

"It is gratifying to report that the major institutions processing between 50,000 and 85,000 pounds of linen weekly — all use soap," reported Whitbread.

Whitbread informed the committee that the experts still believe tallow soap or pure alkali the greatest cleaners of clothes.

The health officer also noted that the water throughout Greater Victoria requires no detergents to boost cleansing power. "It can be surmised," wrote Whitbread, continuing his laundry lesson, "that the main users of detergents are the housewives, and their attention should be directed to the fact that in Victoria detergents for laundering are absolutely unessential because of the good soft quality of the Victoria water supply."

Library Board Secrecy Irks Labor Delegates

The alleged firing of a permanent staff member and holding a library trustees meeting in secret were slammed by Victoria Labor Council Wednesday.

The council, unhappy over the Victoria Public Library reorganization under recommendations of the Woods, Gordon report, will protest to the board and to municipalities which appoint its members.

VLC delegates heard a report by Dora Payne, representing the library staff association, Local 410 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, who said that contrary to a promise made in February the board had fired a permanent staff member.

This was part of a plan to reduce staff from the existing 80 to 65 persons, she said, noting that before cutbacks the total staff had been 101, including temporary employees.

INTERNAL MATTERS

When the labor council complained that library service was being jeopardized, it was told that steps being taken were internal matters and no business of the council.

Delegate Tony Fraser, of the Boilermakers Union, suggested that service had in fact declined, that things were "a mess, and you can't find what you are looking for."

He added: "It seems the library board is deliberately trying to sabotage the library for some reason or other."

VLC secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan said he felt the job that was being done previously by chief librarian John Lort was good and that Lort was capable.

SAID CHAOTIC

"I've gone down there since the changes took place, and it's chaotic," Ryan said.

He noted that a trustee, Alan Newberry, had called for Lort's resignation because he disagreed with some of the Woods, Gordon proposals.

Noting that Newberry had called for the resignationt of Lort, Ryan said that if anyone should resign over the new policies, it should be Newberry.

"It is shocking to realize that Mr. Newberry and others are jockeying for municipal prestige," Ryan said.

PAPER PATRONIZING

The council also had called for a responsible position to be taken by the press, which had until recently refrained from commenting on the public issue. Ryan had observed that Times editor Brian Tobin is a member of the board.

The Times May 28, Ryan said, had printed a long editorial headed The Ruffled Leaves, which he described as 'A very patronizing, condescending editorial about the library."

MOTHER, BABY HIT AS CAR JUMPS CURB

A 19-year-old mother and her three-week-old baby were hit by a car that jumped the curb following a two-car collision at Gladstone and Stanley about 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Dianne Dobbyn, 1447 Taunton, and her daughter Kirstie, were treated for minor injurieks and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mrs. Dobbyn was pushing the youngster in a baby carriage on the sidewalk when a car, driven by Herman Schmidt, 3320 Shelbourne, struck them before hitting a power pole, police said.

The Schmidt car had collided with another vehicle, driven by Merlin Naduriak, 24, of 1264 Gladstone, before jumping the curb out of control.

SAILOR SURVIVES ORDEAL AT SEA

A Victoria man found clinging to the mast of his foundering sailboat off San Juan Island by U.S. Coast Guard on Wednesday was released from Royal Jubilee Hospital this morning.

John Bowness, 22, of 1068 St. Louis, was flown by U.S. Coast Guard rescue helicopter to hospital and treated for shock and exposure after his nine-hour ordeal.

Bowness explained he was sailing off the San Juan Island in calm water when a heavy gust of wind hit him from behind. He was half way through the process to taking down his sails when the wind caught the boat and tipped it over.

He stood in water up to his knees as his 17-foot Davidson day sailer drifted between False Bay and Eagle Point.

Arthur Mayse...

MY WIFE AND I APproached marriage with the wariness of racoons investigating a box-trap. We were footloose and free, and the wedded state as we'd observed it seemed too often to be burdensome and even stifling.

Two of our young-married friends had already been divorced, and that bothered us. As individuals, each of them was a lively, likeable and interesting person. But as a couple, they failed miserably.

If they and others we knew couldn't go the course, there was no guarantee that we'd achieve a lasting union.

This fact in itself wasn't daunting enough to stop us. But, in a kidding sort of way, we cooked up an escape clause that could be invoked if marriage should prove to be a mistake. Each year, we would re-negotiate our contract, and if one or both of us wanted out, so be it.

Then, because we were happiest together and never quite complete when we weren't, we stood up before a minister.

As a matter of tradition, we still dust off our contract once a year. We did so while walking our dog this morning. Neither of us was of a mind to apply the escape clause.

We don't claim a perfect marriage ... merely a durable and prevailingly happy one that has deepened with the years.

Come to think of it, I haven't the least idea how a "perfect" alliance might be defined.

Absolute agreement on all matters? Never a cross word spoken? Tastes that correspond right down the line, and completely matching temperaments?

Perhaps such alliances exist. If so, I suspect the partners are phlegmatic to the last degree, and their marriages fearfully dull.

Were ours made to that recipe, I wouldn't consider it much the best and most precious thing in my life, but only an exercise in boredom.

We get along very well. Our early fear that we would one day find we had nothing left to talk about has never materialized. What we didn't know then is that silence can also be a companionable state and a form of sharing.

We are also thoroughly aware of our differences in temperament, taste and minor attitudes.

I'm a putter-off till tomorrow ... the sort of husband who takes forever or a little longer to tighten the loose doorknob and replace the worn tap washer. My wife is a do-it-now person.

She prefers factual reading to fiction which I enjoy, and makes up for my lack of money-sense by her ability to stretch our funds to an improbable extent when need be.

Yet these opposites have never got in our way; in fact, they complement each other and make for a better-rounded partnership.

I don't mean that we spend time pondering such matters, or that we unfailinging reflect sweetness and light. However, thinking about our years together now, I am aware of some facts about marriage that we didn't know when we set out on the adventure.

One of these is that love doesn't conquer all. Anyone who thinks it does might be wiser to stay single, or live in what was once defined as sin.

People in love can and sometimes do remain stubbornly juvenile-minded even when wed. They can be selfish, totally unrealistic, arbitrary and over-demanding.

The prolonged, wounded silence ... the wrath that not only lets the sun go down but is served up warmed over next day ... these can do cruel things to a marriage and to a family. They are based upon self-pity, which is first cousin to self-righteousness, and no less a saboteur.

I don't suggest that every marriage can succeed. Some are doomed from the start, or even earlier, and the divorce that ends them comes as an act of mercy.

In the other kind — those that work — a paradox exists. My wife and I thought we might be giving up our freedom. As matters turned out, we feel we have found a wider freedom in marriage than either of us could have attained outside it.

MOVE 'POLITICAL WIN'

Way to Peace . . . Military Victory

'I can now state that this has been the most successful operation of this long and difficult war.' —NIXON

By CHALMERS ROBERTS
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Wednesday night did exactly what this capital had expected him to do — declare victory in Cambodia and announce a big new American troop withdrawal from South Vietnam before election day.

He even showed the TV-viewing public some of the captured weapons, and the White House put out a list of what had been swept up "as of 4:00 p.m. June 3, 1970."

In short, Nixon gloried in what he termed the "most successful operation of this long and difficult war." He reminded the critics of their cries of disaster, and he swore they were proven wrong.

While June 30 remains the deadline for the last American to get out of Cambodia, the president kept open his option for further "air missions" after that date, and he left the South Vietnamese all the room in the world to keep up their incursions into Cambodia.

On the short term, the weight of the evidence is with the president on what has been accomplished by the military action inside Cambodia. The real problem is long-term: what comes after Cambodia, what will the enemy do, is there any hope of a negotiated settlement?

In discussing the long term, the president conceded that "there is one basic commitment" he has made that is "yet to be fulfilled" — ending the war. His prescription remains the same: Gradually turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese if the North Vietnamese will not negotiate as he sees negotiations.

His unspoken but implicit aim remains: A South Vietnam free of Communist domination. Given the stalemate at the Paris peace table, that amounts to a military victory as the way to peace.

As to negotiations, Nixon said all past offers remain on the table, but he made no new offers. And if Hanoi will not negotiate on those offers and instead respond militarily, they will

'MEDIEVAL, ILL-EQUIPPED'

B.C. Prison Hit by MPs

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Members of the Parliamentary justice committee Wednesday labelled the federal British Columbia Penitentiary "ancient, medieval, outmoded and ill-equipped for the modern prison concept of rehabilitation."

Donald R. Tolmie (L — Welland), chairman of the 12-man committee, said the maximum security prison is 100 years old and was built in an age when punishment was the only criterion.

The committee came close to a confrontation with penitentiary officials when prisoners in the segregation unit alleged they were given daily release periods only after authorities were advised of the MPs' tour.

Prison officials said those prisoners usually take part in a work program, but added that there was no work for them until Monday.

Assistant Deputy Warden T. J. Ellis said the release order was made before anything was known about the committee's tour.

He said most of the segregated prisoners are sex offenders — considered to be the lowest form of criminal by other inmates — and are usually in the "hole" at their own request, either for self protection or because they can't face up to life as a part of the prison population.

"This shouldn't be allowed to exist," said Robert McCleve (PC — Halifax).

"These men will be mental wrecks when they are released."

"I have to fight an aggressive nature," he said.

"But in here, I have to fight back to stay alive, and this defeated the whole purpose.

WANTS MATSQUI

Kannister asked the committee to "give us the women's section at Matsqui Prison" and Douglas Hogarth (L — New Westminster) thought it was a good idea.

"It was designed for 150 women," said Hogarth.

"There were 22 there during our visit Tuesday. At this rate, it is costing the taxpayers $23,000 a year for each woman inmate."

The tour of the New Westminster prison completed the committee's B.C. visit. Earlier it had inspected the Matsqui institution, Agassiz Mountain Prison, the Agassiz Work Camp and the Georgia Release Centre in Vancouver.

Today, it visits the penitentiary in Prince Albert, Sask., prior to returning to Ottawa.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Harold Cardinal's Red Paper approach to the Cabinet was welcomed here today, but not his indication that if it fails he'll switch to Red Power tactics.

Before leading a delegation of 150 Indian Association of Alberta members, and several B.C. chiefs, to present the Red Paper to the government, Cardinal told a reporter he was ready for a long struggle if the Trudeau administration resists the proposals.

"Our movement is going to last longer than any politician," he said.

And he added that if the Cabinet turns down the Red Paper, Canada's 238,000 Indians "may have to consider the route of civil disobedience."

Len Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops and the only Indian in the Commons, expressed mixed feelings about Cardinal's attitude.

"I don't buy this social dissent bit and I don't believe most Indians will either," he said in an interview.

"He might choose it, and a few other individuals too, but the basic Indian community is stable and sound. It is not given social dissent.

"It would rather discuss and debate the issues to bring change."

However, without having seen the Red Paper's contents, he praised its existence as a manifestation of a new mood among Indians.

"Today's exercise is a useful thing and this is the way it has to be done — solid, researched and well-produced written counter-proposals," he said.

NO DIALOGUE

"For too long there has been no dialogue between Indians and the government and policy has been made in a paternalistic vacuum.

Break in Towboat Strike Seen by Guild Spokesman

Times News Services

Merchant Service Guild chief negotiator Capt. Arne Davis following a negotiating session which ended 4 a.m. today hinted at the possible break.

He said he could offer no details about the actual negotiations and did not elaborate except to say the guild is aware of close support from other unions.

In B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday, the guild was fined $5,000 by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm for contempt of court. The guild ignored an injunction banning picketing at a pulp mill on Howe Sound, just north of Vancouver. The plant closed when 400 workers refused to cross the guild picket line.

The towboat strike has hit hard at the B.C. forest industry, because the tugs are used to tow logs to the sawmills, and to tow away barges of sawdust. Supervisory personnel are operating some tugs, but all products handled this way have been declared "hot" by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

EXPIRES JUNE 15

The IWA contract itself expires June 15 and affects almost 30,000 men in southern B.C. About half already are out of work because of the tug dispute. Mediation officer Clive McKeen conducted exploratory talks Wednesday in the forestry dispute, meeting both sides separately.

Bennett Asks Lockout End On Schools

Premier Bennett today appealed to both sides in the construction industry lockout to make a "special effort" to proceed with construction of schools and hospitals.

He also announced he has asked for an immediate cut in the prime interest rate charged by chartered banks from 8½ to 7½ per cent to stimulate the economy.

But Bennett, just back from a successful Japanese tour, expressed confidence in B.C.'s economy as "the best in the nation" and looked forward to a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year.

"Nobody should be fearful," he told a press conference, adding that all it will take for "a really good year" is for management and labor to get

Jet Ransom $100,750

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A hijacker, feared armed with explosives, commandeered a TWA jetliner over New Mexico today, flew it to Washington where he took $100,750 in ransom and then flew off with 50 passengers aboard for an unknown destination.

Capt. Billy Williams, the same pilot who flew a young Marine hijacker to Rome last year, was aboard the 727 when it left Dulles Airport outside Virginia after refueling.

The plane was on the ground just over an hour. In that time it took on a full load of kerosene fuel, enough to give it a range of 1,900 miles.

"You don't know how to count money and you don't even know the rules of the law."

The FBI believed the hijacker was Auther G. Barkley, Phoenix, reported to be incensed by a federal judgment of $471.78 against him for back income taxes in 1964.

The hijacker had demanded $100 million in ransom — all in small bills — from the U.S. Supreme Court. The airline put up the $100,750 which it got from two Washington banks and it was carried aboard the 727 by Williams in a white canvas bank bag.

TWA officials said they learned of the hijacking about an hour after takeoff when the hijacker took over the radio and announced that he was taking the plane to Washington because his rights had been violated.

"I'm addressing the Supreme Court," TWA quoted the hijacker as saying. "I want $100 million in small bills delivered to the plane."

Benson to Seek Pay, Price Controls

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A stormy Liberal caucus session Wednesday finally agreed that Finance Minister Edgar Benson should sound out the provinces this week on their reactions to a proposal to impose compulsory wage, price and profit guidelines.

Unemployment stirred up the storm behind the closed doors, where worried Liberal backbenchers spoke freely. They voiced alarm over the mounting proportions of the unemployment problem, linking it with the federal government's anti-inflation restraints.

Benson as the finance minister was again the storm centre. He has already been the target of criticism for his proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Now the Liberal MPs are very worried by the growing numbers of unemployed.

It is understood the government acknowledged that the numbers of unemployed were greater than it expected would develop from its anti-inflation program.

How best to cope with the situation was discussed. The imposition of compulsory wage, price and profit controls and the easing of anti-inflation restraints both were debated.

Arguments for and against applying mandatory guidelines for prices, profits and wages were heard. Those opposed warned that the country had gone through the hard experience of such controls during the war and should avoid them at all costs. Others advocated controls and contended Canadians would learn to live with them.

When he meets with the provincial treasurers from the 10 provinces in Winnipeg Friday and Saturday, Benson will sound out their reaction

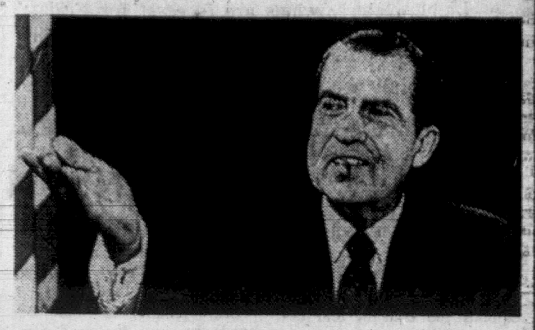
Way to Peace . . . Military Victory

'I can now state that this has been the most successful operation of this long and difficult war.' —NIXON



By CHALMERS ROBERTS
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Wednesday night did exactly what this capital had expected him to do — declare victory in Cambodia and announce a big new American troop withdrawal from South Vietnam before election day.

He even showed the TV-viewing public some of the captured weapons, and the White House put out a list of what had been swept up "as of 4:00 p.m. June 3, 1970."

In short, Nixon gloried in what he termed the "most successful operation of this long and difficult war." He reminded the critics of their cries of disaster, and he swore they were proven wrong.

While June 30 remains the deadline for the last American to get out of Cambodia, the president kept open his option for further "air missions" after that date, and he left the South Vietnamese all the room in the world to keep up their incursions into Cambodia.

On the short term, the weight of the evidence is with the president on what has been accomplished by the military action inside Cambodia. The real problem is long-term: what comes after Cambodia, what will the enemy do, is there any hope of a negotiated settlement?

In discussing the long term, the president conceded that "there is one basic commitment" he has made that is "yet to be fulfilled"" — ending the war. His prescription remains the same: Gradually turn the fighting over to the South Vietnamese if the North Vietnamese will not negotiate as he sees negotiations.

His unspoken but implicit aim remains: A South Vietnam free of Communist domination. Given the stalemate at the Paris peace table, that amounts to a military victory as the way to peace.

As to negotiations, Nixon said all past offers remain on the table, but he made no new offers. And if Hanoi will not negotiate on those offers and instead respond militarily, they will

'MEDIEVAL, ILL-EQUIPPED'

B.C. Prison Hit by MPs

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Members of the Parliamentary justice committee Wednesday labelled the federal British Columbia Penitentiary "ancient, medieval, outmoded and ill-equipped for the modern prison concept of rehabilitation."

Donald R. Tolmie (L — Welland), chairman of the 12-man committee, said the maximum security prison is 100 years old and was built in an age when punishment was the only criterion.

The committee came close to a confrontation with penitentiary officials when prisoners in the segregation unit alleged they were given daily release periods only after authorities were advised of the MPs' tour.

Prison officials said those prisoners usually take part in a work program, but added that there was no work for them until Monday.

Assistant Deputy Warden T. J. Ellis said the release order was made before anything was known about the committee's tour.

He said most of the segregated prisoners are sex offenders — considered to be the lowest form of criminal by other inmates — and are usually in the "hole" at their own request, either for self protection or because they can't face up to life as a part of the prison population.

"This shouldn't be allowed to exist," said Robert McCleve (PC — Halifax).

"These men will be mental wrecks when they are released."

"I have to fight an aggressive nature," he said.

"But in here, I have to fight back to stay alive, and this defeated the whole purpose.

WANTS MATSQUI

Kannister asked the committee to "give us the women's section at Matsqui Prison" and Douglas Hogarth (L — New Westminster) thought it was a good idea.

"It was designed for 150 women," said Hogarth.

"There were 22 there during our visit Tuesday. At this rate, it is costing the taxpayers $23,000 a year for each woman inmate."

The tour of the New Westminster prison completed the committee's B.C. visit. Earlier it had inspected the Matsqui institution, Agassiz Mountain Prison, the Agassiz Work Camp and the Georgia Release Centre in Vancouver.

Today, it visits the penitentiary in Prince Albert, Sask., prior to returning to Ottawa.

Troop Pullouts Denied

Times News Services

A U.S. command spokesman in Saigon today refuted President Nixon's statement Wednesday night that U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam have been resumed.

Nixon in his television speech in Washington said:

"As a result of the success of the Cambodia operations, Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird has resumed the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. Fifty thousand of the 150,000 I announced April 2 will be out by Oct. 15."

But the U.S. command in Saigon, when questioned on the withdrawal, denied any troop pullout.

"Everything's still static now," said a spokesman.

Nixon told the American people the Cambodian operation had been a success.

Calling the attacks on the Communist sanctuaries "the most successful operation of this long and difficult war," he said that "we will keep our timetable for troop withdrawals."

The withdrawals, which were halted in late April because of the Cambodian operation, now have been resumed, the president said.

SHOWED FILM

The president used film and captured material to illustrate his argument that huge quantities of supplies have been captured in the operation he announced on April 30.

He said that the success to date "has guaranteed that the June 30 deadline I set for withdrawal of all American troops from Cambodia will be met."

When he announced the Cambodian operation, the president said, critics charged that it would "increase American casualties, widen

Postal Talks Resume

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Rotating strikes kept about 1,600 postal workers off the job today as unions stepped up the pressure in their contract dispute with the government.

Latest to join the walkouts, as representatives of the unions and the government reopened negotiations this morning for the first time since mediation efforts ground to a halt, were 350 workers in Saskatoon and eight other Saskatchewan centres.

The Council of Postal Unions and the government's treasury board negotiators met today for the first time since mediator A. W. R. Carrothers, called in last week, packed up his efforts. Carrothers, ending his mediation attempt Tuesday, said neither side was willing to budge enough to warrant continuation of mediation.

NO COMMENT

Representatives of both sides refused to comment on whether they expected progress at today's meeting.

National union headquarters is orchestrating the rotating strike calls through a teletype network.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Harold Cardinal's Red Paper approach to the Cabinet was welcomed here today, but not his indication that if it fails he'll switch to Red Power tactics.

Before leading a delegation of 150 Indian Association of Alberta members, and several B.C. chiefs, to present the Red Paper to the government, Cardinal told a reporter he was ready for a long struggle if the Trudeau administration resists the proposals.

"Our movement is going to last longer than any politician," he said.

And he added that if the Cabinet turns down the Red Paper, Canada's 238,000 Indians "may have to consider the route of civil disobedience."

Len Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops and the only Indian in the Commons, expressed mixed feelings about Cardinal's attitude.

"I don't buy this social dissent bit and I don't believe most Indians will either," he said in an interview.

"He might choose it, and a few other individuals too, but the basic Indian community is stable and sound. It is not given social dissent.

"It would rather discuss and debate the issues to bring change."

However, without having seen the Red Paper's contents, he praised its existence as a manifestation of a new mood among Indians.

"Today's exercise is a useful thing and this is the way it has to be done — solid, researched and well-produced written counter-proposals," he said.

NO DIALOGUE

"For too long there has been no dialogue between Indians and the government and policy has been made in a paternalistic vacuum.

Break in Towboat Strike Seen by Guild Spokesman

Times News Services

Merchant Service Guild chief negotiator Capt. Arne Davis following a negotiating session which ended 4 a.m. today hinted at the possible break.

He said he could offer no details about the actual negotiations and did not elaborate except to say the guild is aware of close support from other unions.

In B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday, the guild was fined $5,000 by Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm for contempt of court. The guild ignored an injunction banning picketing at a pulp mill on Howe Sound, just north of Vancouver. The plant closed when 400 workers refused to cross the guild picket line.

The towboat strike has hit hard at the B.C. forest industry, because the tugs are used to tow logs to the sawmills, and to tow away barges of sawdust. Supervisory personnel are operating some tugs, but all products handled this way have been declared "hot" by the B.C. Federation of Labor.

EXPIRES JUNE 15

The IWA contract itself expires June 15 and affects almost 30,000 men in southern B.C. About half already are out of work because of the tug dispute. Mediation officer Clive McKeen conducted exploratory talks Wednesday in the forestry dispute, meeting both sides separately.

In the pulp and paper industry, negotiations have

Bennett Asks Lockout End On Schools

By BRUCE YEMEN

Premier Bennett today appealed to both sides in the construction industry lockout to make a "special effort" to proceed with construction of schools and hospitals.

He also announced he has asked for an immediate cut in the prime interest rate charged by chartered banks from 8½ to 7½ per cent to stimulate the economy.

But Bennett, just back from a successful Japanese tour, expressed confidence in B.C.'s economy as "the best in the nation" and looked forward to a balanced budget by the end of the current fiscal year.

"Nobody should be fearful," he told a press conference, adding that all it will take for "a really good year" is for management and labor to get

Jet Ransom $100,750

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A hijacker, feared armed with explosives, commandeered a TWA jetliner over New Mexico today, flew it to Washington where he took $100,750 in ransom and then flew off with 50 passengers aboard for an unknown destination.

The plane was on the ground just over an hour. In that time it took on a full load of kerosene fuel, enough to give it a range of 1,900 miles.

Before takeoff the hijacker dictated a message to President Nixon and the State Department.

"You don't know how to count money and you don't even know the rules of the law."

The FBI believed the hijacker was Auther G. Barkley, Phoenix, reported to be incensed by a federal judgment of $471.78 against him for back income taxes in 1964.

The hijacker had demanded $100 million in ransom — all in small bills — from the U.S. Supreme Court. The airline put up the $100,750 which it got from two Washington banks and it was carried aboard the 727 by Williams in a white canvas bank bag.

TWA officials said they learned of the hijacking about an hour after takeoff when the hijacker took over the radio and announced that he was taking the plane to Washington because his rights had been violated.

"I'm addressing the Supreme Court," TWA quoted the hijacker as saying. "I want $100 million in small bills delivered to the plane."

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A stormy Liberal caucus session Wednesday finally agreed that Finance Minister Edgar Benson should sound out the provinces this week on their reactions to a proposal to impose compulsory wage, price and profit guidelines.

Unemployment stirred up the storm behind the closed doors, where worried Liberal backbenchers spoke freely. They voiced alarm over the mounting proportions of the unemployment problem, linking it with the federal government's anti-inflation restraints.

Benson as the finance minister was again the storm centre. He has already been the target of criticism for his proposals in the white paper on tax reform. Now the Liberal MPs are very worried by the growing numbers of unemployed.

It is understood the government acknowledged that the numbers of unemployed were greater than it expected would develop from its anti-inflation program.

How best to cope with the situation was discussed. The imposition of compulsory wage, price and profit controls and the easing of anti-inflation restraints both were debated.

Arguments for and against applying mandatory guidelines for prices, profits and wages were heard. Those opposed warned that the country had gone through the hard experience of such controls during the war and should avoid them at all costs. Others advocated controls and contended Canadians would learn to live with them.

When he meets with the provincial treasurers from the 10 provinces in Winnipeg Friday and Saturday, Benson will sound out their reaction
